INTRODUCTION.

The Bavarian Collection of Pictures.

A HISTORICAL SKETCH.

WHEN the Brothers van Eyck first elevated painting in oil to a higher art in Germanic lands, it was a Bavarian prince who became their earliest patron and protector. John of Bavaria, sometimes called Jean sans Pitié, a grandson of the Emperor Ludwig, was from his seventeenth year Bishop of Liege, and, after the removal of his niece Jacobaea, also Count of Luxemburg, Brabant and Holland. He had taken Jan van Eyck into his service in October 1422, in which position the painter remained until the death of Duke John, towards the close of the year 1424. That this was not merely the honorary post of valet-de-chambre is evident from the circumstance that Jan was obliged to leave his home and brother, and establish himself at the Hague, where the Duke held his court.

As Jan van Eyck's greatest ability lay in the painting of portraits it cannot be doubted that likenesses of the first Bavarian princes were produced at that time, but unfortunately there are none of these among the numerous portraits by this great master which have been preserved; and not even one of his otherwise widely-spread works is now to be found in Bavaria. Moreover all traces of the extensive foreign possessions of the nearest successors to Ludwig the Bavarian in Brandenburg, the Tyrol and the Netherlands have entirely disappeared.

Viewed in the light of the history of art Bavaria, during the Middle-Ages, was decidedly behind the times. While, after the eleventh century, the Rhenish countries and Saxony showed an active fostering of art with good results, and while the neighboring Ecclesiastical Principalities and Free Cities, like Würzburg and Bamberg, Ratisbon, Augsburg and Nuremberg, raised themselves to a relatively high grade, the towns of Bavaria, even those favored by ducal residence, remained in this respect miserably poor. This was particularly the case with Munich, where the Emperor Ludwig the Bavarian himself occupied an extremely inartistic palace. Until the erection of the Frauen-Kirche, 1468—1488, the Capital contained no building of distinction within its narrow limits. It was the same with Ingolstadt. Landshut alone was somewhat in advance, and could boast, not only of a notable mediaeval palace (the Trausnitz), but of the Church of St. Martin, which is in architectural respects decidedly superior to the Frauen-Kirche of Munich. Still none of these churches with long and high aisles, built in a style which did not appear until the close of the Middle-Ages, can be remotely compared with such a jewel as the late Romanic edifice at Bamberg, or with the Gothic Cathedral of Ratisbon.

In the province of painting this backwardness was even more noticeable. The manufacture of stained glass had, indeed, reached a certain stage of development and found the earliest seat of its activity with the monks at Tegern-See. In oils the same Convent offers in this age some fairly successful attempts, and at all events a greater industry than is elsewhere observable. Otherwise, in the art of painting, Bavaria proper, up to the beginning of the sixteenth century, scarcely rose above a rude barbarism. The Italian (Giottesque) influence was limited to the region south of the Alps, while that of the Rhenish masters did not extend beyond the Lech and the Danube. Not only Nuremberg, but the neighboring Augsburg, was slow in producing any visible impression upon the Bavarian Capital; and Albert IV., appears neither to have coveted nor to have obtained any work of the great contemporary painters of Nuremberg and Augsburg. By reason of the inadequate means of intercourse Nuremberg was practically very remote from Munich, which city indeed was situated on no great highway connecting with Italy; and its relations with the nearer Augsburg, both politically and socially, seem to have been somewhat inimical. It was certainly not by chance that the elder Holbein, in two pictures at least, chose the diamond-checked costume of Bavaria to clothe the figures of executioners!

The first employment at court of painters from the guilds of Nuremberg, Augsburg and Ratisbon may be credited to Duke William IV. (died 1550) who gave extensive orders to Altdorfer, Feselen and B. Beham, Burgkmair, Brew and others. The chief works executed by these masters for the Duke were the portraits of William IV. and of his wife Jacoba of Baden, referable to the year 1526; also the series of large historical pictures of Antique Battle Scenes, five of which have since been collected together in one cabinet of the Pinakothek, viz: the Alexandrian Battle by Altdorfer, the Sacrificial Death of Marcus Curtius by Beham, Julius Caesar's Siege of Alesia by Feselen, Porsenna's Reception of Cloelia with her Roman Virgins by the same, and the Battle of Zama by Brew; while the badly injured painting by Burgkmair of the Battle of Cannae has remained at Augsburg, and three: Mucius Scaevola by Hans Schöpfer, Horatius Cocles and Manlius Torquatus by B. Refinger, otherwise known only as a painter of miniatures and a designer of maps, were carried away by the Swedes in the Thirty Years' war and are now preserved in the National Museum of Stockholm (Nos. 294, 295 and 269 of the Catalogue of 1887). The Amorous Scene of Cranach (No. 258 of the Stockholm Museum) was likewise derived from the Bavarian Collection, as were also, without doubt, the Judgment of Paris by Hans Schöpfer the Elder (Stockholm No. 297) and the Lucrece by Jörg Brew the Elder, in the Ekman Collection in Finspong. Feselen's Susanna in the Bath, the coat-of-arms upon which proves it to have once belonged to Duke William IV. of Bavaria, was in 1888 bought from a private collection in Sweden, and is now in the Gallery of Augsburg.

The first real collection of pictures dates from the time of Albert V. (1550—1579), with whom begins the long line of Bavarian patrons of art. The attention of this prince was, however, chiefly directed to the acquirement of magnificent utensils; this dilettantism he carried out with equal taste and expense, so that the Bavarian Treasure Chamber, which owes to him its best possessions, ranks, in artistic respects first in the world. He was less fortunate in collecting antiques; being chiefly interested in series of portraits, and moreover badly served, he often fell a victim to either the dishonesty or the ignorance of his Italian agents. As a collector he seems to have devoted himself to the gathering together of curiosities, with which it was then the fashion to fill the cabinets of varieties at the smaller German courts, and to have valued pictures rather on account of the subjects represented than for the sake of art or the artist. Indeed the portraits of emperors, princes and philosophers, especially those of celebrated men, from semi-mythical heroes down to criminals broken upon the wheel and to deformed creatures, play a great role in the lists of paintings remaining from this age. The contemporary descriptions linger lovingly over works which from the manner of their execution can be considered as little better than playthings. We thus read, for instance, of a Salvator Mundi »with a bobbin, where-with the eyes of the picture may be winked« (mit einem Schnürl, damit man des Bildes Augen bewegen kann). Otherwise the lists are so meagre and unscientific as to be well-nigh valueless; among nearly seven hundred works mentioned by Fickler's Inventory of 1598 (Cod. Bavar. 2133 of the Munich Library) scarcely a dozen, besides the historical pictures of William IV., can be identified in the present collection. The most important of these are the Lucrece, life-size, by Dürer, the portrait of the Chancellor Bryan Tuke by Holbein, and the Susanna by Altdorfer.

In the five volumes of official records, now in the Archives at Munich, which chronicle the acquisition of works of art by Albert V., accounts of pictures appear but incidentally, often without the name of the artist, or evidently wrongly attributed. Among these are a Portrait of Albert Dürer, by Burgkmair, a »Counterfeit Presentment« (Contrafeht) of an Old Doctor by Albert Dürer, and a Portrait of Raphael by himself. The name of Titian is frequently mentioned, but only in connection with the purchase of bric-à-brac and antiques, and we learn nothing definite in regard to the ordering or delivery of works by his own hand. The assumption is unfounded that the picture styled by the inventory »Venus and Cupid with Flora and two Satyrs bearing Fruit« is identical with the Secret of Venus ascribed to Titian. And the subject of the painting by this master, which was granted to the Emperor in 1592 from the Munich Cabinet of Art, is not described in the document drawn up by J. Barvitius, (Royal Archives, Fürstensachen, II. Spec. Lit. C., Fasc. 51, No. 543).

William V., who reigned from 1579 to 1597, was financially not in a position to cultivate the passion for collecting displayed by his predecessor. We find, after 1580, a yearly sum of 400 guldens doled out for the purchase of pictures; but when we consider that, with a ducal income of 112000 guldens annually, the Church of St. Michael and the Seminary of the Jesuits, even after their dedication, required during the years between 1590 and 1597, the sum of 263000 guldens, — that at the same time the building of the Maxburg in Munich and the Old Palace in Schleissheim was in progress, — and that the devout Duke gave liberal donations to the churches, and was a generous patron of ecclesiastical music, (instance Orlando di Lasso), — we can understand that painting, in so far as it was fostered by the ruler, must have been mostly limited to the decoration of churches, and the illumination of liturgical books. This was the more the case as the Diet of the Provinces, at the beginning of William's reign, had refused the special grants which the strong will of Duke Albert V. had extorted from the representatives, — requiring the »pernicious buying of curious and useless things« to be given up, and even expressing the desire that the collections of Albert V. should be sold. In fact William V. in 1583 announced that no more purchases of works of art should be made. Fortunately the pious wish of the Diet in relation to the sale remained unfulfilled.

The highly cultivated and energetic son of William V., Maximilian, who afterwards became the first Elector of Bavaria, seemed inclined to follow the princely example of Albert V., and although his means were largely in request for the rebuilding of the Old Palace in Munich (the so-called Neue Veste), which had been much injured by fire in 1580, he still considerably enriched his favorite collections of gems and antiques. For the latter of these he ordered Chr. Angermair of Weilheim to make the celebrated cabinet for gold coins, now in the National-Museum at Munich, which is considered one of the masterpieces of ivory carving.

As he was the first who, in painting, fostered art for its own sake he collected, at small expense of money, but with many letters and proffers of favor, some of the chief works of Dürer, an artist whom he seems greatly to have admired. Among these were the Altar of Paumgarten from the church of St. Catharine at Nuremberg, acquired in 1613; the beautiful Heller Altar from the Church of the Dominicans at Frankfurt in 1615, which unfortunately fell a prey to the flames at the burning of the Palace on the 22^d of December 1729; the so-called Four Apostles by Albert Dürer, which he obtained from the Town Hall at Nuremberg in 1627, after the miseries of the Thirty Years' War had descended like a scourge upon Germany, and, finally, that portion of the Breviary of the Emperor Maximilian which had been illustrated by Dürer and Cranach. What pains the Elector took to bring into his possession an authenticated Aldegrevier, then especially prized, is shown by a letter from him to the Count Palatine Wolfgang William of Neuburg, now preserved in the Royal Archives, (Pfalz-Neuburger Nachträge, No. 213). This was an age of decline in German art, which, after Hans Mielich (died 1572), Chr. Schwarz (died 1597), and A. Elsheimer (died 1620), had sacrificed its independence to a servile imitation of the Venetian style, especially that of Tintoretto. With a just estimate of this degeneracy, and with a presentiment of the brilliant development of art in the Netherlands, Maximilian had already surrounded himself with a number of painters from the latter country, among whom Peter de Witte exercised a certain superintendence. He seems also to have favored native artists who had been trained in the Dutch School, as is shown by the long and busy employment at court of the portrait painter Nicholas Prugger.

This connection with the North, encouraged perhaps by the progressing work upon the Castle at Heidelberg, contrary also to the Italian tendencies favored by the Imperial Court and by the Archiepiscopal Bishoprics of South Germany, may have helped to open the way for the predominating influence of the Netherlands in the collecting of pictures. It is true, not much could be done in this direction because of the troublous state of the times, still we find by a letter from Rubens to Sir Dudley Carleton, dated May 17th 1618, that he had then delivered his great Lion Hunt to the Duke of Bavaria, which picture was the beginning of the famous Rubens Collection of Munich. Afterwards, on account of the War, the Gallery was oftener robbed than increased, especially during the latter half, when the struggle pressed most heavily upon Bavaria, and little attention could be given to art.

Ferdinand Maria (1651 — 1679), the successor of Maximilian, led art temporarily in another direction. Through his marriage with Henrietta Adelaide of Savoy, the daughter of an Italian prince, he was entirely surrounded with Italian works of architecture, sculpture, painting and music. He felt, moreover, so strongly the influence of his time that his purchases were almost entirely restricted to the paintings of the Eclectic School, then so much in vogue, and were in that style of decadence already so prevalent. Indeed Ferdinand Maria was more interested in the decoration of his palaces at Munich and Nymphenburg, and the Church of the Theatines, than in forming collections.

It remained for his son and successor Max Emanuel (1679—1726), to elevate the Bavarian Gallery to one of the first in Europe. His extended relations with the courts of Spain, France, Germany and Italy offered to him rich opportunities; and, not accustomed to limit his desires, he always found either cash or credit for gratifying them. Thus, in the early years of his reign, he had made such great acquisitions that he thought it necessary to build for their accommodation a Palace-Gallery at Schleissheim, for which work the architect E. Zuccali was called from Italy in 1684 and employed until the occupation of Bavaria by the Austrians. The position of Max Emanuel as Stadtholder of the Netherlands also furthered his inclinations in this direction, and on September 17th, 1698 he closed a negociation with Gisbert van Ceulen of Antwerp, by which, for the sum of 90000 Brabantine guildens, the collections were enriched with one hundred and five choice pieces. Among these were twelve paintings by Rubens, of which the life-size Portrait of Helena Fourment with the naked child upon her lap, two other Portraits of the Same, the two Landscapes, the Walk in the Garden, and Peace and War are still in the Gallery. The Mars and Venus, and the Lot and his Daughters were presented by the Emperor to the Duke of Marlborough at the time of the occupation of Bavaria by the Austrians in 1706; the Adoration of the Magi was carried to France in 1800 and has remained in Lyons; while the Diana with the Beasts by Snyders was given in dower to the Grand Duchess Mathilde, and removed to Darmstadt. Equal in importance with these works were fifteen by van Dyck, among which the portraits of the organist Liberti, of the painter de Wael and his wife, of the sculptor Colyns de Nole with his wife, the life-size portraits of the Duke de Croy and of his wife, and a Crucifixion still adorn the Pinakothek. One of the most valuable of this series, an equestrian figure of Charles I. of England, was given to the Duke of Marlborough with those by Rubens above mentioned, and has recently been bought by the National Gallery of London. The whereabouts is not known of the portrait of the Duke of Brabant on Horseback, the knee-pieces of the King and Queen of England, the likenesses of two abbots, and the Jesus and Anna. Among the pictures obtained from van Ceulen were also a Lion and Wild Boar by Snyders, two large hunting pieces (perhaps identical with those in Fürstenried) by P. de Vos, two paintings by Fyt, and two by Boel. The collection further contained eight Brouwers, of which the most important, the celebrated Brothel, came during the reign of Max Joseph III. into the possession of Herr von Triva, who also acquired the four Claudes mentioned in the catalogue of this great purchase. This partial list may be concluded with two large works of J. de Heem, the well-known Still-life by Verendael and de Heem, three flower-pieces and seven other pictures by Brueghel, a landscape in a round frame by P. Bril, five Wouwermans, one G. Dou, two large flower-pieces by Monnoyer, and finally, the Three Boys throwing Dice by Murillo.

Apart from this most important acquisition, which was not completely paid for until the year 1774, Max Emanuel, stimulated by the increased opportunities offered by the Spanish War of Succession, allowed no chance for purchase to escape him, even after his Electoral income was entirely exhausted. As the two rulers succeeding him, Charles Albert (1726—1745), though otherwise a lover of elegance, and Max Joseph III. (1745—1777), contributed little to enrich the Gallery, we may conclude that the collection at Schleissheim, as displayed in the Inventory of 1761, dates in the main from the time of Max Emanuel. That Inventory makes mention of one thousand and sixteen paintings, and a similar number may be supposed to have hung in the palaces at Munich, Nymphenburg and Dachau.

In Schleissheim, however, we find comparatively few Italian pictures of importance. Among these are the Charles V., and the Vanity by Titian, the latter formerly ascribed to Giorgione; the Double Portrait by Bordone; Jupiter and Antiope by Paul Veronese, once attributed to Titian; and the St. Peter by Ribera. The works of Rubens which had been added to the Bavarian Collection are the Massacre of the Innocents; the Meleager and Atalanta; the Helena Fourment in full figure; and the Peter* and Paul. Van Dyck is further represented by portraits of the engraver Malery, of Maria Ruthven, of Spinola, and of Mirabella; the fine sketch of the Battle of Martin d'Eglise, and the beautiful picture of the Repose upon the Flight into Egypt. With the Brouwers, now increased in number to eleven, are seventeen Teniers, a dozen or two by Jan Brueghel, and half a hundred excellent pieces by other masters of the Dutch School. Not reckoning the wrongly attributed Boys playing at Cards, we find in Munich in 1788 three Murillos, some of them, probably, pearls from the Spanish crown which came into possession of the Elector before the reversion of Spain was lost to Max Emanuel by the death of the Crown Prince.

When the Bavarian line of the Wittelsbachs ended with Maximilian III. in 1777, and Charles Theodore, who, according to family compact was the heir of the Palatinate, inherited also the provinces of Bavaria proper, a prospect was opened of unusual increase for the collections through the concentration of the paintings treasured in the Wittelsbach palaces of the Palatinate. But Charles Theodore, who disliked to live in Munich, hoping always to take up his residence again in Mannheim, permitted his two galleries to remain in Düsseldorf and Mannheim, and contented himself with providing a building for the collections in the Capital, easy of access to amateurs and artists. This structure, of no great architectural importance, still stands upon the north side of the Hof-Garten, and is today occupied by the casts from antique sculptures, and the Ethnological Museum. Rittershausen, in his Merkwürdigkeiten München's, 1788, gives an attractive sketch of this Gallery, which had been furnished in 1779 with pictures from the stores of the Palace, and from Schleissheim. Charles Theodore also enriched the collection by some purchases, mostly of Dutch cabinet pieces, among which may be distinguished several of great excellence, such as the Woman Reading by Peter de Hooch.

After the death, in 1799, of Charles Theodore, who was succeeded by Max Joseph of the Palatine-Zweibrücken line, a third collection of paintings from the Palatinate, that of Zweibrücken, came into possession of the Wittelsbachs. These pictures, nearly two thousand in number, had been subject to so many vicissitudes during the years of the French Revolution that their preservation seems little less than miraculous. Upon the advance of the Sans-Culottes in 1793, the paintings were saved at the last moment, before the Carlsberg Palace at Zweibrücken, in which they had formerly been preserved, fell a sacrifice to the flames, together with a valuable cabinet of natural curiosities still remaining in it. The Gallery was also in great danger at Mannheim. The protection assured by the French, through an especial clause in the Capitulation of 1795, afforded it no security; and the safety of the paintings was even more endangered during the siege of the city by the Austrians, at which time they had been placed in damp underground vaults. Later on these much-threatened treasures escaped an even greater risk: Count Rumford had planned a sale in England which the pecuniary position of Max Joseph seemed to render unavoidable, and had even taken steps to have the collection sent out of the country. But happily the definite negotiations had only proceeded so far as to include the engravings, the cabinet of coins and medals, and the jewels, when Charles Theodore died and the succeeding Ducal Family of Zweibrücken took up its Electoral residence in Bavaria.

In 1799, with the transportation of the Zweibrücken Collection to Munich, a task which, in the disturbed condition of Mannheim, was only effected through the self-sacrifice and ability of Mannlich, commenced the concentration in the Capital of all the Wittelsbach galleries. But for some time the pictures were not in security, even there, for scarcely had the galleries of the Palatinate been installed in Munich, Schleissheim and Nymphenburg, before it became necessary to hide some of the best works in Ansbach, from the beginning of 1800 until October 1801. And when, in the spring of 1800, Moreau made his entry into Munich, General Le Courbe made forcible requisition of a number of pictures from the Electoral Palace for his own private possession, while the French Commissioner for Science and Art in Germany, Citizen Neveu, selected as his booty seventy-two pieces from Munich and Schleissheim. It is difficult to say what consolation for this robbery the good Bavarians of that day may have found in a declaration still extant, given in high-sounding terms on the twelfth day of the month Fructidor, in the Eighth Year of the Republic, which promises an indemnification after peace should be reestablished, pledging as a guarantee the justice and upright character of the First Consul. Certain it is that nothing definite was heard of the proposed compensation by works of French masters until the general reclamation in 1814 and 1815, which was first made for the Bavarian pictures by Friedrich Thiersch, and afterwards by G. Dillis. The latter gave, on the 15th of October 1815, a receipt for twenty-eight pieces which had been taken from Munich and Schleissheim to the Louvre, but advised his Court to give up the remaining two-thirds, then scattered in the provincial museums and in some of the churches of France, as not worth the trouble and expense attending their recovery. Dillis may have been right in the main, for, even among the twenty-eight paintings returned, only three are of really great excellence: namely Titian's Crown of Thorns, Rubens', Meleager, and Altdorfer's Alexandrian Battle; still some really important ones were hereby lost to the collection, as, for instance, the Adoration of the Magi by Rubens, one of the earliest works of this master, which is now in the Museum at Lyons.

The addition which the Bavarian Gallery of paintings received from the Zweibrücken Collection had thus finally been reduced to nine hundred and sixty-four pieces. Even in point of the subjects represented the collection displayed a peculiar character. The situation of the Duchy of the Palatinate, and the individual inclinations of the Princes of Zweibrücken, explain the predominance of French over German painters. The French pictures of greatest merit were the two large landscapes by Claude, the Sunset, and the Noontide with the figure of Hagar, the Cook paring Turnips by Chardin, the charming Nude Girl reclining upon a Sopha by Boucher (now in Schleissheim), and the Young Girl by Greuze. It is not necessary to speak in detail of various works by G. Poussin, Le Brun, Le Moine, Le Prince, Subleyras, Desportes, and others. Among the Flemish painters Rubens was not represented at all, but the list makes mention of eight Teniers. The greater number of the best pictures were by Dutch masters, chief among whom are the two Ruysdaels, Ostade, Wouwerman, Berchem, Both, and the two de Heems; further the Dutch Cook by Metsu and the two large Wynants, also the large Hondecoeter now in Schleissheim.

Next after the removal of the Zweibrücken Collection to Munich followed that of the Cabinet of Pictures from Mannheim. This latter was founded by the Elector Charles Philip, last descendant of the House of Palatine-Neuburg, who had as little desire for the restoration of Heidelberg as for occupying the remote residence of his ancestors at Düsseldorf. The Cabinet was further enriched by Charles Theodore; his chief purchasing agent was one Nic. de Pigage, who advanced in 1783 a claim for 65000 Livres, but was put off with a yearly income of 5500 livres payable in Mannheim from the Alsacian revenues. (Royal Archives, Fasc. 124, Fürstl. Haus- und Familiensachen No. 115.) The collection, containing seven hundred and fifty-eight numbers, was chiefly Dutch. To it belonged the two large Rembrandts of the Pinakothek, the Holy Family, and the Sacrifice of Isaac formerly attributed to F. Bol; further the Man and Wife by F. Bol, once ascribed to G. Flink; four Brouwers, among them the Room of the Village Barber, several by Adr. and Is. Ostade, and many by Dou and Mieris. Terborch's Boy with the Dog, J. Steen's Scrimmage, Helst's Admiral Tromp, and du Jardin's Sick Goat are of especial excellence. Particularly deserving of note are six valuable pieces by the German master Elsheimer, compared with whom Netscher and Denner, at that time so highly prized, are scarcely worthy of mention. The Flemish School was scantily represented, still this cabinet added to the Bavarian Collection of paintings: by Rubens the admirable Shepherd and Shepherdess, the Sabine Women, and the so-called Portrait of the Master's Mother; by van Dyck that little jewel the Portrait of Snayers, and the large St. Sebastian; by Brueghel, alone and together with Balen, not less than twenty-two cabinet pieces, among which is the Flora, distinguished as being partly the work of Rubens. Among the few Italian pictures the preference of the collector for the Neapolitan School, and for Carlo Dolce is noticeable, the former being finely represented by St. Andrew's Descent from the Cross, the Death of Seneca, and the Woman with the Hen, by Ribera. The Cake Eater by Murillo alone represents the Spanish School.

Scarcely had the two collections found scant accomodation in the gallery-buildings at Munich and Schleissheim and the palaces of Munich and Nymphenburg when, in 1803, the secularization of the Ecclesiastical Estates in Bavaria and the Tyrol, then belonging to that country, brought to them a rich addition. Unfortunately the care for the removal of the pictures was in great measure entrusted to commissioners entirely ignorant of the development of painting, and the officials of the Gallery, however learned they may have been in regard to the works of the Dutch masters, and of the later Italians, knew almost nothing of the art of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries. The frequent ascription of paintings to the well-known names of Dürer, Cranach, and Holbein was almost ludicrous; and the general attribution of inferior works to Schorel and Isr. van Meckenem wholly arbitrary. All not thus included fell under the head of »Early Franconian«, without a sign of any distinction of the chief schools, like that of the van Eycks, that of Cologne, of Suabia, or of Franconia. If, in view of the low scientific stand-point of that age, we cannot make this a reproach to the officials, it still seems unpardonable and irreparable that, at such a critical time, all regular keeping of records should have been neglected, whereby a mass of material which might have been available for the history of art was forever lost. Compared with such a loss it even appears of less importance that, by this act, a multitude of altar pictures were torn from the altars to be crowded together, unmounted, in attics, buried in cellars, or at best sold by auctioneers for ridiculous prices, although in this way many churches were needlessly disfigured.

The results of the secularization were not without importance in regard to works of the Early German schools; especially Kempten, Ottobeuern, Benedictbeuern, Tegern-See, Kaisheim, Wengen near Ulm, and Wettenhausen yielded valuable contributions. Paintings of a later date were also not lacking, like Tintoretto's great Crucifixion, taken from the Church of St. Augustine in Munich, now in Schleissheim, Rubens' Trinity from the same place, the Woman of the Apocalypse by Rubens from the Cathedral in Freising, and the Adoration of the Magi by Tiepolo from the Cloister Schwarzach in Franconia. By the act of secularization works of hardly less value were obtained from the Archiepiscopal Galleries of Würzburg and Bamberg. The evacuation of the palaces of Dachau, Neuburg and Haag, in the years of 1803 and 1804, contributed little of note; for when, here and there, an isolated picture of importance was brought to light, like the enigmatic Still-life by Jac. de Barbari from Neuburg, now in Augsburg, it was only transferred from one place of deposit to another. The incorporation at that time, and in the years following, of the Free Cities, the Franconian Margraviates and Chapter-Houses, was of more noteworthy result; at least no harm befell the paintings hereby, for Augsburg and Nuremberg, like Bamberg, retained far more in their local galleries than they gave up, and the Gallery of Ansbach still remains almost intact in the Palace at that place. This is also the case with the excellent collection in the Palace of the former Elector of Mayence at Aschaffenburg.

All these accumulations from the entire kingdom were, collectively, of less value than one single acquisition: namely the Düsseldorf Gallery, the removal of which to the capital could no longer be delayed. Upon the last day of his rank as Elector, while still Duke of Berg, the 31st of December, 1805, Max Joseph ordered this collection to be brought to Munich.

Düsseldorf had, as is well known, come under the rule of the Palatinate through the marriage of the Count-Palatine Philip Ludwig of Neuburg-Sulzbach with Anna, daughter and heiress of Duke William of Jülich and Berg. The son of this couple, Wolfgang William, himself united to a daughter of the Bavarian Duke William V., the Pious, had become a catholic in 1614, to the great grief of his father. This step, together with his possession of the Duchy of Jülich and Berg, which lay near to the Netherlands, gave opportunity for intercourse with Rubens and with van Dyck. The Duke obtained from the former, in 1618, the Last Judgment for 3500 guildens, and, in 1620, four other altar pictures, then for the most part placed in the Church of the Jesuits in Neuburg, at present collected in the Rubens Hall. He afterwards formed a personal acquaintance with van Dyck, who delivered to him, among other works, that splendid Portrait with the Dog, also in the Pinakothek. The correspondence of the Duke with Rubens is still preserved. It seems, however, that in these transactions Wolfgang William had no idea of forming a gallery and apparently as little thought of this had his son and successor Philip William, 1653—1690, who, with the Electorate in 1685, inherited also from Elector Charles the Heidelberg Collection of paintings, two hundred and seventy-two in number. It is difficult to determine whether or not these were of great importance, as the existing Testamentary Inventory is without the names of the artists and the dimensions of the pictures, and its descriptions are so vague that we cannot surely indentify any one amongst them with those now in our possession.

The love for art evinced by Wolfgang William was felt in a still greater degree by his grandson, John William, 1690—1716, who resided altogether in Düsseldorf, his inclinations even leading him to considerable personal sacrifices. This was the more fortunate as he thereby attained a true understanding of what was of lasting merit in painting, notwithstanding the debased taste so prevalent in his time. It was not, therefore, so dangerous for the collection as might have been feared, that the Prince was surrounded by a host of inferior Dutch and Italian court painters, such as van Douven, van der Werff, F. Weenix, Rachel Ruysch, Zanetti, Belucci, Pellegrini, and others, particularly as harmless employment was given to the Italians in the decoration of the Palace of Bensberg. More important was the acquisition by Wolfgang William of some earlier works, now in the collection, several of which were removed to Düsseldorf from the churches of Neuburg, regardless of their original purpose, and not without difficulties with the Roman Curia. Of greatest consequence, however, in this matter was the marriage of the Elector with the Princess Maria Loisia de Medici, who, besides several Italian masterpieces, brought to Düsseldorf a considerable dowry, thereby providing a welcome addition to the scanty means of her husband.

Perhaps no other collection of similar value and importance, yet so limited in number as that of Düsseldorf, — which consisted of only three hundred and fifty-eight pieces, — has ever been brought together; certainly not in Germany. Its importance is well characterized by the fact that, while scarcely one of the pictures included in the before mentioned Inventory of the Heidelberg Cabinet of the Elector Charles is today recognizable, in the Düsseldorf Gallery, on the other hand, there is scarcely one, with exception of merely decorative works, which cannot be identified with certainty. The Rubens Hall of Munich, which had already been known as the most important collection of this artist's paintings in the world, received from Düsseldorf not less than forty additional masterpieces. Of the twenty-nine larger van Dyck's, which our Gallery now contains, seventeen are from this source, also three of the finest Snyders, two pieces by Jordaens, the large G. de Crayer, and the two by Douffet, the celebrated Biblical Series of six by Rembrandt, and his Portrait by himself, the large Dou, the Twelfth-night Festival by Metsu, and many choice Dutch and Flemish cabinet pictures. Among the Italian paintings then acquired, besides masterpieces by Carracci, Domenichino and Reni, are Tintoretto's Portrait of Vesalius, the two Madonnas with Saints and Donors by Palma Vecchio and Titian, notably also the Holy Family by Andrea del Sarto, and Raphael's Holy Family of the House Canigiani.

The founder of the Gallery did not live to enjoy the new building, his death occurring just as it had been completed; and his successors had little pleasure in the collection. Charles Philip, who resided in Mannheim, founded there a cabinet of his own; but his heir, Charles Theodore of Sulz-bach was so disinclined to the grander style of painting, in comparison with the cabinet pieces which he favored, that when, during the Seven Years' War, at the siege and bombardement of Düsseldorf by General Wangenheim, in 1758, the Gallery had been sent to Mannheim for protection, he returned it after six years, professedly for want of room, — and this notwithstanding the immense extent of the Mannheim Palace! The peculiar relations of this prince with France in the matter are not quite clear. Mannlich, in his manuscript memoirs, asserts that Denon, during the second visit of Napoleon to Munich, claimed a right to choose forty pictures from the Düsseldorf Gallery, according to an old treaty of peace made by Charles Theodore with the French. But King Max Joseph succeeded in obtaining from the Emperor a declaration that, even if such a contract existed, it should be considered as void. Shortly after the death of Charles Theodore, Max Joseph himself had the intention of parting with these treasures. On the 17th of December, 1799, he wrote to von Utzschneider, who was at that time Councillor of Finance, that the exhaustion of his funds by the pressure of the war had forced upon him the resolution either to mortgage or to sell the Düsseldorf Gallery, which, since the advance of Bernadotte in 1794, had been removed to Glückstadt. Utzschneider was authorized to enter into negociations with his London correspondents for this purpose, fortunately, however, without result.

Scarcely was the collection returned from Glückstadt to Düsseldorf, when, shortly before the surrender of the Duchy of Berg to France in return for the Margraviate of Ansbach, a third removal took place, this time to Kirchheimbolanden. Finally, on the 19th of January, 1806, this much travelled gallery was taken from what was then French territory, in twelve wagons with four and six span of horses, and, upon the evening of February 7th, arrived safely in Munich. (See the account by the superintendent of the removal, Professor Medicus of Würzburg, dated March 20th, 1806.)

able that the Bavarian State and Court allowed no opportunity for further additions to escape them. Leprieur, Lucchesi and Artaria appear as active purchasing agents. Some chance acquisitions were particularly fortunate, such as the charming Paul Potter, obtained in 1803 from the Gallery of Cassel in exchange for Ribera's Mater Dolorosa; and the Portrait of Dürer by himself which was bought in 1805 of Councillor von Pez for 600 gulden, — a sum certainly not representing one hundredth part of its real value, and offering a striking contrast to the 4000 gulden paid thirteen years previously for the Portrait of a Capuchin by Raphael Mengs. The Altar with the St. Sebastian by Holbein was acquired in 1809, with fifteen other pictures, from the College of St. Salvator in Augsburg for 2710 gulden, and the Crown Prince, in 1810, paid 340 ducats for the portraits of Wolgemut and Hans Dürer by Albert Dürer.

About this time commenced the buying of works of the Italian masters of the Quattro- and Cinquecento, mainly through the influence of the Crown Prince, although his interest was still chiefly directed towards the collecting of antiques. It is true we find at first more mistakes with high-sounding names than really valuable acquisitions, yet the Raphael Altoviti, a most important work, was obtained as early as the year 1808, at an expense of 49000 lire. There was a still greater outlay at the conclusion of peace in Paris, in 1815, where Dillis made purchases to the amount of 215000 francs. When it was possible to secure, from General Sebastiani, Murillo's Altar Piece from the Church of the Capuchins at Seville, and the large Madonna by Titian for 20000 and 40000 francs respectively, also, from the estate of the Empress Josephine at Malmaison, the Madonna in the Rose-Garden by Francia, and the Santa Conversazione by Cima da Conegliano for the low prices of 15000 and 8000 francs, — four pictures which alone are worth more than was given for all the fifteen, — we must not complain if some, like the Madonna by Guercino for 10000, and the Venus Landscape by Albani for 24000 francs, were overpaid.

Though we find in these efforts to augment the collection many evidences of a blind groping, still the grand object of King Ludwig I. is clearly recognizable. The views upon art prevalent during the first half of our century directed the attention of the purchasers to three schools which had formerly been inadequately represented in the Bavarian Gallery, namely the Early German and Flemish, and the Quattro- and Cinquecento of Italy. This is not the place either to explain or to criticize in detail the acquisitions of King Ludwig I. We can only be astonished at the fulness of insight and good-fortune, of perseverance and self-sacrifice, which, united in him, enriched the Bavarian Collection, in this province of art, with the best examples obtainable. We need only to bear in mind the magnificent works of Filippo and Filippino Lippi, of Botticelli, Ghirlandajo and Perugino, and especially Raphael's two Madonnas: di Tempi and della Tenda, all of which were bought for large sums, yet far below their present value; as well as the Old Dutch and Old German collections of the Brothers Boisserée and of Prince Wallerstein, acquired, the first for 240000, the other for 54000 guldens. All these new additions were paid for by the King from his own private purse, and opened to the enjoyment of the public with the sole reservation of a fidei commissum.

Even before the acquisition of the Düsseldorf Gallery, with its large requirements, it had been unquestionably evident, — since the increase from Mannheim, Zweibrücken and the Bavarian Palaces, and from the secularization, — that the space provided by the building in the Hof-Garten, though supplemented by the use of Schleissheim, Nymphenburg, and the disposable rooms in the Palace itself, was not sufficient for the accommodation of the pictures. Director von Mannlich consequently received instructions to prepare a plan for a new edifice, which design is still to be seen among the official records. The unsettled state of politics at that time fortunately prevented the fulfilment of this project. Some steps, however, were taken in the matter after the Peace of Paris, first by proposing to enlarge the structure of Charles Theodore's gallery, and later to occupy the space then available in the buildings upon the western side of the Arcade. In 1822 the services of Klenze were engaged, and the so-called Zwei-brücken Garden on the Brienner Strasse was bought for the site. But the design submitted in May 1823 to the committee of the Academy of Art was refused, because of objections to the proposed location. A second plan, prepared in October of the same year, for the open lot of ground west of the Türken-Kaserne, obtained the acceptance of the Academy and the approval of the King. As Maximilian died in 1825 he did not see the laying of the corner stone, so that the building was carried on during the first decade of the reign of King Ludwig I.; not, however, without stirring up much strife, as the situation, then considered remote, was regarded as unfortunately chosen, and the luxury of silken tapestries, at an expense of 35000 guldens, was actively opposed, both by the legislative bodies and the Society of Artists. The building was opened in 1836.

Soon after the removal of the paintings to their new quarters a threatening cloud appeared upon the horizon: claims upon the Düsseldorf Gallery being advanced by that city and the Duchy of Berg, and, through them, by the Prussian Government. The protest made by the people of Düsseldorf against the removal of the pictures elicited from King Maximilian I. the remark that they might as well object to his Bavarian inheritance altogether, and there the matter rested until after the transfer of the Duchy of Berg to Prussia, when the opportunity was seized for publishing complaints in the »Rheinischer Mercur« of 1815 and in the »Deutscher Beobachter« of 1818. These agitations and the pressing representations of a Rhenish deputation to the King of Prussia obtained the first official notice from the government in 1837. An exchange of diplomatic notes was hereupon begun and carried on until February 27th, 1837, when, by a well-grounded explanation made by the Director of the Archives, von Coulon, Bavaria so forcibly presented its just claims that the matter was permitted to rest again for thirty years.

The War of 1866 brought up the question anew; and, in consequence of the efforts made by the Diet and journals of the Rhenish Countries, (compare the essay by A. V. Hardung: Zur Reclamation des Düsseldorfer Bilder-Galerie-Hauptschatzes. Drei Studien. Düsseldorf, 1868), it was decided in the thirteenth article of the Berlin Treaty of Peace, August 22^d, 1866, that the claims upon the Düsseldorf Gallery should be brought to a decision by arbitration in a German court of judges. Years of painful suspense followed, which could not be entirely relieved by an occasional soothing word from the official press. As the melancholy train departed with the thirty millions paid to Prussia as indemnification for the war, all good Bavarians could but think with anguish that possibly a second might follow, with a freight which could never be replaced. Rumors were current of extensive preparations by jurists upon both sides, and, the case once brought into court, there was good reason for anxiety as to its result. King Ludwig I. himself had observed, after reading the statement drawn up by von Coulon in the year 1837: »the right of possession should never be allowed really to enter the tribunals of justice, the decisions of which, in regard to ownership, were sometimes astonishing«. But the matter had not even come to a determination as to the German court before which it should be tried, when it transpired that, in the second clause of the Treaty of Alliance made between Bavaria and Prussia on November 23^d, 1870, it had been agreed by the government of the latter country that »the claims made in 1866 by Prussia upon the Gallery removed from Düsseldorf shall not be further pursued, and all rights in this regard are now and forever relinquished«.

The jurists of the Bavarian Crown who had studied most deeply into this affair seem, however, not to have felt much doubt as to its favorable issue, even in case of a trial. The founder of the Gallery, John William, had ordered, in the eighth paragraph of his will, dated 1693, that all the paintings should remain the property of the Electoral House. This explains the agreement between his successor, the Elector Charles Philip, and the Count-Palatine John Christian of Sulzbach, as well as the will made by the former in 1742: »cum vinculo perpetuo forever«. The Articles of Succession adopted between Max Joseph III. of Bavaria and the Elector Charles Theodore in 1766, 1771 and 1774 reiterate this condition of a fidei commissum, as does also the Article Separé in the Treaty of Peace of Teschen, made by the Elector of the Palatinate and the Duke of Zweibrücken on the 13th of May 1779. Moreover there is not one picture which can be proved to have been bought by the States, while many are well known to have been inherited, received in dowry, or acquired at the private expense of John William. Until the first years of our century the entire cost of maintaining the Collection had been borne by the Treasury of the Domain; and on the giving up of the Duchy of Berg into French possession the Gallery had not only been considered as not belonging to the Province, but had even been removed to Kirchheimbolanden, a town then under French jurisdiction, where it had safely awaited the further disposition of the owner. The removal of the pictures to Munich had received the sanction and assistance of a French prefect; so that, when the Duchy was evacuated in favor of the Prussians, in 1815, the delivery of the Gallery to them had not been brought into question at all. The French Minister of Finance at Düsseldorf even inquired of the Bavarian Government, on the 23^d of December, 1811, what disposal should be made of the picture-frames which had been left behind, — an opportunity for recovering these unfortunately not embraced by the Directors of the Munich Gallery because of certain considerations of taste.

The arrangement of the pictures in the Pinakothek continued until recently, with few alterations, as it had been made by Dillis; partly for the reason that every change in the hanging occasioned difficulties with the silken tapestries, and was thus as injurious to the general effect as it might be advantageous to individual works. Certain changes, made in the years between 1860 and 1870, brought to light such unsightly patches and inequalities in the tapestries that their condition was not endurable, and an entire renewal of the wall-covering could be no longer delayed. Advantage has been taken of this circumstance to reorganize the arrangement of the pictures, improving it in several directions. The just complaints, frequently made in later years, in regard to the protection of the paintings in the Palace at Schleissheim have been in so far attended to that at least the most valuable of these were removed from that Gallery to Munich, where they are certainly more accessible to public inspection. To this end it was indispensable to gain more room in the Pinakothek, and this has been done by adapting and opening three halls, previously otherwise occupied. This has resulted in a better arrangement of the pictures, historically, as well as in regard to individual excellence.

Although the works had originally been grouped according to schools, it was nevertheless found necessary to correct certain errors of historical arrangement, as well as to make good some disturbances of their sequence which had resulted from occasional rehangings.

It is evident that this reorganization required an entirely new writing of the catalogue. In this it has been found necessary to give up the former numbering, as, besides the frequent exchanges of pictures which have hitherto taken place between Munich and the other Bavarian Galleries, more than a hundred numbers have recently been sent back to Schleissheim, and twice as many brought to the Pinakothek from that place. A similar interchange has in a few instances been effected with Nuremberg. The objections attendant upon the sacrifice of the old numbers, already widely known in technical literature, has been met by placing them in brackets beside the new. The numbers published in the catalogue of the Schleissheim Gallery by Teichlein in 1875 have been similarly added to those pictures lately brought from that Palace to Munich. An alphabetical system of arrangement, first proposed, seemed impracticable because many of the paintings are without the names of the artists, or, in the present stage of research, are liable to alteration. A mere designation by schools would not agree well with the alphabetical method, as by it a search for the anonymous pictures is rendered difficult. Experience has shown also that the frequent double names of the masters cause much confusion in such an arrangement. The condition of the Munich Gallery lent especial weight to this conclusion; for, as the order of the paintings always has been and still is historical, it was fitting to frame the catalogue also historically. By this the relative position of the pictures upon the walls and in the list very nearly coincides, and the use of the catalogue as a guide is much facilitated. A separate index is furthermore provided.

This examination into the Collection resulted in many additions, corrections and certifications of the signatures and monograms, which, whenever it appeared desirable, have been reproduced in fac-simile in this book. The researches into the history of individual paintings proved less satisfactory, as might have been expected from the meagre condition of the archives. The registers of the Royal Pinakothek and of the Bavarian Archives were thoroughly searched for information concerning the pictures, but the result was unimportant. It was generally possible only to ascertain from which of the various galleries of the House of Wittelsbach the works had been removed, or from what previous owner they had been purchased. The references made to special literature are limited to points of greatest importance, that the conciseness of the catalogue may conduce to its general usefulness. Thanks are due to Director Dr. Bode, to Dr. L. A. Scheibler in Berlin, and to Director A. Bredius of the Hague for their suggestions. The latest scientific catalogues: of Schwerin by Dr. Schlie, of Brunswick by Dr. Riegel, of Berlin by Dr. Meyer, of Cassel by Dr. Eisenmann, and of Amsterdam by Dr. Bredius, have assisted in the correction, especially of the biographical notices, to which, however, considerable attention had been given in the former catalogue by Marggraff. For the list of photographs, engravings and other reproductions, attached to the present volume, we are indebted to the Curator of the Royal Bavarian Cabinet of Engravings, Dr. W. Schmidt. Otherwise, with exception of this Introduction, the reexamination of the paintings in the Pinakothek, and the writing of this Catalogue, have been the combined work of Ad. Bayersdorfer, Curator of the Pinakothek, and of the undersigned.

The changes in this new edition of the catalogue consist of such corrections of the dates in the biographical notices as have been rendered necessary by the researches of the past five years. In some few cases the attribution of pictures to an artist, or to a school, has been altered, and this has led to changes in the hanging and in the sequence of the description. The numbers of these pictures remain, however, the same. There have been but two additions to the collection, since the publication of the first edition: namely the Triptych of Ulrich Apt the Elder (No. 292 A), lent by the University of Munich, and the Virgin and Child by Lionardo da Vinci (No. 1040 A), bought for the Pinakothek in 1889.

HALL OF THE FOUNDERS.

The six life-size oil paintings in this hall represent those princes of the House of Bavaria, and of the Electoral Palatinate, who have been prominent in founding or increasing the Collections of Pictures here united.

1. Elector Maximilian I of Bavaria (1597—1651). Founder of the Gallery in the Palace built by him at Munich.

Painted by Nic. Prugger. Canvas, 2.45 m. h., 1.42 m. br.

2. Elector Maximilian Emanuel of Bavaria (1679—1726). Founder of the Gallery at Schleissheim.

Painted by Martin Maingaud, 1703. — Canvas, 2.45 m h., 1.45 m br.

3. Elector John William of the Palatinate (1690—1716). Founder of the former Düsseldorf Gallery.

Enlarged by J. Richter, in 1835, from the original by van der Werff, now in the Pinakothek. Canvas, 2.45 m h., 1.42 m br.

4. Elector Charles Theodore of the Palatinate and of Bavaria, (1777—1799). Chief founder of the Gallery at Mannheim. Upon the table the electoral hat and the imperial crown.

Signed: Pompeo de Batoni, ad vivum pinxit, Romae MDCCLXXV. Canvas, 2.45 m h., 1.42 m br.

5. Maximilian Joseph, Elector 1799, King of Bavaria as Maximilian I, 1806—1825, united the collections of Bavaria and of the Palatinate.

Signed: J. V. Stieler, 1822. — Canvas, 2.45 m h., 1.47 m br. Engr. by C. Hess.

6. Ludwig I., King of Bavaria (1825—1868). Laid the corner stone of the Pinakothek April 7th 1826; and enriched the Gallery with the Boisserée Collection, and that of Prince Wallerstein.

Signed: J. Stieler, 1826. — Canvas, — 2.45 m h., 1.45 m br. — Engr. by Alb. Reindel.

EARLY SCHOOLS OF THE LOWER RHINE AND OF THE NETHERLANDS.

Halls I and II. — Cabinets I—III.

MASTERS OF COLOGNE AND OF THE LOWER RHINE.

Master William of Cologne and his School.

William of Cologne is mentioned in 1380; his style was dominant until 1425.

1. (607.) St. Veronica with the Handkerchief, upon which is the face of the Saviour with the Crown of Thorns. Below, in each corner of the picture, are three angels singing.

Wood, gold-ground. — 0.76 m h., 0.47 m br. — Boissérée Collection. Lith. R. Strixner. — One of the few works by the painter called, upon rather slight grounds, Master William. A very similar, but weaker, picture is in the National Gallery at London (No. 687.) — Hall I.

2. (608.) The Virgin, seated upon the throne, holds in her right hand a rose, and with the left the Child upon her lap, who plays upon a stringed instrument which an angel holds towards him. Near the throne stand St. Catharine and St. Barbara; in the foreground, seated upon the turf, are St. Agnes and St. Apollonia. Blue winged angels, making music, rise towards the throne and surround it; two of them hold a crown above the head of Mary. School of Master William.

Round painting upon wood, gold-ground. — 0.75 m in diam. Boiss. Coll. Cab. I.

Stephen Lochner and his School.

Master Stephen painted the altar-piece of the Cologne Cathedral soon after 1426, and died in 1451.

3. (605.) St. Anthony the Hermit, with staff and bell; His Holiness Pope Cornelius, with tiara, cross and drinking horn; St. Magdalen with the vase of ointment; and the figure of the donor on a smaller scale.

Wood, dark ground. — 1.20 m h., 0.80 m. br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by Strixner. — Nos. 3 and 4 are the outer pictures upon the wings of a large altar-piece, a gift of the Muschel-Metternich family of Cologne, formerly in the Church of St. Laurence in that city. The inner paintings of both wings, representing in twelve divisions the Martyrdom of the Twelve Apostles, are at present in the Städel Museum at Frankfurt on the Maine, whither they were removed from the Tossetti Collection of Cologne. The centre, with the Last Judgement, is preserved in the City Museum at Cologne. The Pictures in the Pinakothek were taken in exchange by Melchior Boisserée, 1812, from Mr. Tossetti of Cologne. (Compare: »Sulpiz Boisserée«, Vol I, 1862, P. 173.) — Hall I.

4. (606.) St. Catharine with the sword and wheel; St. Hubert with crozier and book, upon the latter the stag; St. Quirinus in the costume of a knight, holding a lance with a red pennant. Below is the donor. See No. 3.

Wood, dark ground. — 1.20 m h., 0.80 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by Strixner. — Hall I.

5. (1337.) The Virgin, enclosed by a hedge of blooming roses, pinks and strawberries, sits upon a yellow cushion. Upon her lap she holds with both hands the Child in the act of blessing. Four angels are occupied in gathering and bringing flowers. Above, at the left, is God the Father, and opposite, the Dove, amidst angels and clouds.

Wood. — 0.36 m h., 0.27 m. br. — Private possession of the King. Free repetition of a painting by Stephen Lochner in the Museum at Cologne. — (Compare: W. Schmidt. Zeitschr. f. bild. Kunst, XV. Beibl. col. 635.) — Cab. I.

6. (603.) Christ upon the Cross. On the right the Virgin with John the Evangelist, Peter and James Major; on the left Andrew, Thomas and Bartholomew. The figures stand, as also on the wings, before richly-patterned tapestries which are upheld by little angels. Centre-piece of Nos. 7 and 8.

Wood, gold-ground. — 1.32 m h., 1.63 m br. Boiss. Coll. — From the Church of St. Laurence in Cologne. — Hall I.

7. (602.) The Apostles Philip, Matthew and James Minor. Upon the reverse: St. Christopher with the Child, in a landscape. In a division, by a later hand: »Maria salutavit Elisabeth. Luc. I.« Right wing of No. 6.

Wood, gold-ground. — 1.32 m h., 0.76 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Obtained as above. — Hall I.

8. (604.) The apostles Simon, Judas, Thaddeus and Matthew (with a mace). Upon the reverse, much injured in a landscape, St. Maurice, or Gereon, with a shield and the banner of the cross. In a division: »Unde hoc mihi, ueniati matris Domini ad me?« Left wing of No. 6.

Wood, gold-ground. — 1.32 m h., 0.76 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Obtained as above Hall I.

9. (593.) The Abbot St. Benedict with the three Apostles Philip, Matthew and James Minor, standing under gilded tabernacles of Gothic architecture. In a division below are richly mounted skulls as relics in a golden shrine. Figures half life-size.

Wood, gold-ground. — 2.00 m h., 1.50 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by Strixner. Nos. 9 to 18 formerly belonged to a large folding altar with-double wings, in the church of the Benedictine Abbey at Heisterbach in the Siebengebirge. The figures of the eight apostles and saints (Nos. 9 and 10) decorated the inner sides of the wings; representations from the life of Christ and of the Virgin (Nos. 11 to 18) the outer sides. There were originally sixteen wing panels; of these four paintings of scenes from the Passion are in the Gallery at Augsburg; two: the Scourging and the Entombment, were obtained from the Boisserée Brothers, in exchange, by Wallraf, and by him were transferred to the Wallraf-Richartz Museum at Cologne. The whereabouts of two others is not to be ascertained. — Hall I.

10. (594.) The Abbot St. Bernard with the Apostles Bartholomew, Simon and Matthew. Accessories like No. 9.

Wood, gold-ground. — 0.98 m h., 0.72 m br. Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by Strixner — Hall I.

11. (595.) The Annunciation. The angel Gabriel in a priest's mantle, with uplifted wings and the golden staff of a herald, kneels before the Virgin. Above are the Dove, and the half-figure of God the Father. See No. 9.

Wood, gold-ground. — 0.98 m h., 0.72 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by N. Strixner. — Hall I.

12. (596.) The Visitation of Mary. Upon the right the tower-like house of Elizabeth, in the Gothic style, with a Hebrew inscription. See No. 9.

Wood, gold-ground. — 0.98 m h., 0.72 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by N. Strixner. — Hall I.

13. (597.) The Nativity. The Virgin in a straw-thatched wooden hut kneels adoring the Child, who lies before her surrounded by a mandorla, or elongated nimbus (called by some English writers by its Latin name: vesica piscis.) In the background, the manger with the two animals. See No. 9.

Wood, gold-ground. — 0.98 m h., 0.72 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by F. Schnorr. — Hall I.

14. (598.) The Adoration of the Magi. The Virgin sits before the hut with the Child upon her lap, to whom the gray haired King, kneeling, offers a box filled with gold coins. The two others wait, standing, with gold cup and covered goblet. See No. 9.

Wood, gold-ground. — 0.98 m h., 0.72 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by R. Strixner. — Hall I.

15. (609.) Christ upon the Mount of Olives, in the foreground, the Three Disciples sleeping. Above the landscape, gold-ground with colored pattern. See No. 9.

Wood. — 0.98 m h., 0.72 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by Strixner. — Hall I.

16. (599.) Christ, in a red mantle and with the banner of the cross, appearing to the Apostles after the Resurrection. He shows to St. Thomas the wound. Through the door of the hall is visible a gold-ground with colored pattern. See No. 9.

Wood. — 0.98 m h., 0.72 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Hall I.

17. (600.) The Festival of Whitsuntide. The Virgin amidst the Apostles, who, sitting upon wooden benches, are grouped in a circle around her. Above Mary is the Dove. Background, gold, with colored pattern upon both sides of the hall. See No. 9.

Wood. — 0.98 m h., 0.72 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Hall I.

18. (901.) The Death of the Virgin. The Apostles are gathered about the bed; Peter holds the sprinkle, John the burning candle. Above, Christ in half-figure with the soul of Mary as Queen of Heaven. See No. 9.

Wood, gold-ground with colored pattern. — 0.98 m h., 0.72 m br. — Boss. Coll. — Hall I.

19. (1338.) The Virgin, kneeling, adores the Child, who lies naked in a golden mandorla. Above, the Dove in a gold nimbus. In the background the Annunciation to the Shepherds.

Wood, gold-ground. — 0.78 m h., 0.46 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Cab. 1.

20. (1339.) Christ upon the Mount of Olives. The cup before him is drawn in black upon a gold-ground. In the foreground, the Three Disciples sleeping. The betrayer, followed by soldiers, appears behind the fence of the garden in the right background. Companion-piece to the preceding.

Wood, gold-ground. — 0.78 m h., 0.46 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Cab. 1.

21. (1336.) The Nativity. The new-born Child lies upon a linen cloth, adored by the Virgin, by St. Joseph, who holds a lantern, and by five angels, kneeling. Angels in the air, robed in blue, sing the gloria, and bring the message to the shepherds, one of whom has already arrived and looks through the central window. Upon the reverse: Christ at Emmaus, in a small chamber, is in the act of breaking bread.

Wood, each nimbus gilded. — 0.99 m h., 0.99 br. — Boiss. Coll. — (Compare: W. Schmidt, Zahn's Jahrb. V. 47.) — Hall I.

Master of the (Lyversberg) Passion*) and his School.

Under the influence of the early Dutch painters, especially of Dierick Bouts. Known to have worked from 1463 to 1480.

22. (613.) Joachim and Anna at the Golden Gate. In the background, Joachim with the shepherds, and again nearer, speaking with the angel who assures him that his prayer has been heard. Upon the reverse: the upper part of a Crucifixion.

Wood, gold-ground. — 0.82 m h., 1.08 m br. — Boiss. Coll. Phot. by Hanfstängl. This and the following six panels containing scenes from the Life of the Virgin, formed originally the inner side of the wings of a large folding altar (polyptych) in the Church of St. Ursula at Cologne. The eighth picture, the Presentation of Christ, is in the National Gallery of London. (No. 706.) Cab. 1.

Wood, gold-ground. — 0.82 m h., 1.08 m br. — Boiss. Coll. Until 1882 in the Chapel of St. Maurice in Nuremberg. Cab. 1.

24. (614.) The Virgin enters the Temple, in presence of her parents and relatives. In the rood loft of the Gothic choir six winged angels, in blue, are singing. In the

*) This designation is derived from eight Pictures of the Passion, formerly in the possession of the City Councillor Jacob Lyversberg of Cologne, which have been, since 1864, in the Wallraf-Reichartz Museum in that city. The name appears not quite fitting, inasmuch as these Passion Pictures betray the weaker hand of an assistant far more than do the Scenes from the Life of the Virgin, and the others in the Pinakothek by this master. It has recently been suggested that the painter of these pictures (Nos 22 to 29) and of others by the same hand should be designated as the Master of the Life of the Virgin. His style is, it must be admitted, readily distinguishable from that of the Master of the Lyversberg Passion.

Wood, gold-ground. — 0.82 m h., 1.08 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Cab. 1.

25. (615.) The Marriage of Mary and Joseph. The High Priest, with a blessing, unites the hands of the bridal pair, who kneel upon the step of a Gothic altar. Next to the altar are the figures of Moses and two prophets, in the centre a sheet with Hebraic inscription. Upon the reverse: the upper part of a Coronation of the Virgin. See No. 22.

Wood, gold-ground. — 0.82 m h., 1.08 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by Strixner. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Cab. 1.

26. (616.) The Annunciation. Winged angels in blue hold the golden hangings in the background, above which, in a glory of angels, is God the Father. In the rays emanating from his mouth float the Dove and the Child bearing the cross downwards towards Mary. Upon the reverse: the lower part of the Crucifixion. See No. 22.

Wood, gold-ground. — 0.82 m h., 1.08 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by C. Heindel. — Cab. 1.

27. (617.) The Visit of Mary to Elizabeth. In the background, a landscape with hills, a town and castles. On the right stands a female servant holding a fur mantle and overshoes. At the left kneels the donor in a garment of damask lined with black fur. Before him a coat-of-arms with three red ties upon a silver-ground and a helmet ornamented with a stag's head in silver. See No. 22.

Wood, gold-ground. — 0.82 m h., 1.08 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Cab. 1.

28. (618.) The Assumption of the Virgin. She is borne upwards by two angels, and received by Christ. The Apostles, who stand around a closed Gothic sarcophagus, ornamented with figures of the prophets, gaze after the transfigured Virgin. Upon the reverse: the lower part of the Coronation of the Virgin. See No. 25.

Wood, gold-ground. — 0.82 m h., 0.18 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by C. Heindel. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Cab. 1.

29. (625.) The Coronation of the Virgin. God the Father, with the papal tiara, enthroned near the Saviour, holds with him the crown, in the act of placing it upon the head of Mary. Angels singing and playing, surround and sustain the celestial throne. Below kneel the donors, man and wife, coats-of-arms before them with the signs:

Wood, gold-ground. — 0.82 m h., 1.31 m br. — Boiss. Coll. —
 Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Cab. 1.

Wood. — 1.85 m h., 1.32 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Hall II.

31. (611.) The Twelve Apostles. In the centre, John the Baptist and John the Evangelist. On the sides stand Thomas with Bartholomew and Matthew with Peter, (names in each nimbus.) Figures half life-size. Central picture of the two following panels, which together seem to have formed a predella, or pedestal of an altar.

Wood, gold-ground. — 1.20 m h., 1.27 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by N. Strixner. — Hall I.

32. (612.) The Apostles Paul, Simon and Philip (names in each nimbus). Figures half-size. Right wing of the preceding. Upon the reverse: The Nativity. The Virgin and three angels worship the Child lying before them. To the left kneels Mary in adoration, on the right stands Joseph holding a light. In the background the Annunciation to the Shepherds.

Wood, upon the obverse gold-ground, — 1.20 m h., 0.86 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by N. Strixner. — Hall I.

33. (610.) The Apostles Andrew, Matthew and James Minor (names in each nimbus). Upon the reverse: the Annunciation. Figures half life-size. Left wing of the preceding.

Wood, upon the obverse gold-ground. — 1.20 m h., 0.86 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by N. Strixner. — Hall I.

34. (622.) Christ upon the Cross. Upon one side is the Virgin in the attitude of prayer, with St. Ursula and her virgins; upon the other St. John the Evangelist and St. Gereon. The donor kneels at the foot of the cross. Upon the back of the panel the contemporary inscription:

aº MCCCCLXVI Ī Festo annunciatois icarnacois xpī
 obiit honestus ē excellens i theologia m(agi)ster (canoni)cus (eccle undecim) miliū virginū Bernard' de Reyda hic sepult', Orate deū pro eo.

from which it appears that this painting formerly ornamented the Mortuary Chapel of Canon Bernard de Reyda (died 1466) in the Church of St. Ursula at Cologne. School of this master.

Wood, gold-ground. — 0.88 m h., 1.03 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Cab. 1.

35. (620.) St. Cunibert, bearing the model of a church, the Dove upon the mitre. St. Jerome, robed as a cardinal, with the lion. Upon the reverse: the Annunciation. School of this master.

Wood, upon the obverse gold-ground. — 0.78 m h., 0.56 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Cab. 1.

36. (1286.) The Virgin as Queen of Heaven, surrounded by a glory of rays and sitting upon a silver crescent moon. The Child lies upon her lap. Nimbus, crown, rays and stars are golden. School of this master.

Wood. — 1.03 m h., 0.77 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Hall I.

37. (654.) St. James, with sword and book. Background, Gothic architecture. School of this master.

Wood. — 1.01 m h., 0.30 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by N. Strixner. — Hall II.

38. (660.) St. Anthony the Hermit, with staff, bell and torch, trampling upon a devil. Background, Gothic architecture. Companion-piece to the preceding.

Wood. — 1.01 m h., 0.30 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by N. Strixner. — Hall II.

39. (1349.) St. Jerome as a cardinal, in half-figure, the hands resting upon a book. Upon the reverse: three martyrs pierced with thorns. School of this master.

Wood, upon the obverse gold-ground. — 0.48 m h., 0.27 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by N. Strixner. — Cab. 1.

40. (1350.) St. Barbara with chalice and host; half-figure. Upon the reverse: St. Ursula with her virgins in the ship. Companion-piece to the preceding.

Wood, upon the obverse gold-ground. — 0.48 m h., 0.27 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by N. Strixner. — Cab. 1.

Cologne Master, called of St. Severinus, worked between 1480 and 1500. (Comp.: L. A. Scheibler, die hervorragenden Meister und Werke der Kölner Malerschule. Bonn 1880. p. 47 ff.)

41. (87.) Christ upon the Mount of Olives. In the foreground, the Three Disciples are sleeping. Behind them, upon the right, Christ kneeling before the angel. In the background, representation of the Seizure.

Wood. — 1.24 m h., 1.02 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by Strixner and Heindel. Appears, notwithstanding some difference in the dimensions, to have belonged, with the following and with an Assumption of the Virgin, now in the Gallery of Augsburg, to one altar piece. — Hall II.

42. (90.) The Deposition. On the right, middle-distance, the Entombment. In the background, Golgotha, with the thieves still hanging. See No. 41.

Wood. — 1.26 m h., 0.85 m br. — Boiss.-Coll. — Cab. 2.

Cologne Master, called of the Holy Companionship (der heiligen Sippe), and his School.

So called from the Altar piece (No. 199) of the Cologne Museum. Appears after 1486. (Comp.: L. A. Scheibler, Schongauer und der Meister des Bartholomaeus. Repertorium f. Kstw. VII. p. 57.)

43. (32.) The Circumcision of Christ, in a Gothic Hall. The donor and donatrice, on the right and left, kneel at their prayer desks, the escutcheons upon which bear on the one side a black lion upon a ground quartered with blue and gold, upon the other the following sign:  This sign reappears on the escutcheon in a painted window, opposite to which is another with the mark:  In the left background, the Nativity, at the right the Adoration of the Magi. Centre piece to the two following panels.

Wood. — 1.00 m h., 1.95 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by J. Bergmann. Centre of a triptych from the Church of St. Columba at Cologne. — Hall I.

44. (637.) In the centre St. John the Evangelist; on the sides the standing figures of St. John the Baptist and St. Bartholomew. Background, a landscape with the Visitation. Left wing of the preceding.

Wood. — 1.00 m h., 0.90 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by Strixner and Heindel. — Hall II.

45. (648.) St. Christina. At the sides St. Magdalen and St. Barbara. In the background two churches with cupolas, and in the centre a castle on an island in a lake. Right wing of the preceding.

Wood. — 1.00 m h., 0.90 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by Strixner and Heindel. — Hall II.

46. (1343.) St. Jerome as a cardinal, accompanied by his lion. St. Peter with book and key. Beyond, St. Joseph with a staff, leading the Child. In the background a tapestry which closes a hall of columns.

Wood. — 0.90 m h., 0.90 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Hall I.

47. (621.) The Adoration of the Magi. The Virgin sits with the Child in a ruin, under a canopy upheld by angels. One of the kings, kneeling, kisses the feet of the Child; behind Mary the figure of Joseph is partly visible. Upon the reverse: the Trinity. God the Father enthroned beneath a canopy, the green hangings of which are opened by angels. He holds in his lap the body of Christ, above whose head floats the Dove. Below, on the right, kneels a nun.

Wood, gold-ground. — 1.19 m h., 0.86 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Hall I.

Cologne Master, called of (Boisserée's) Bartholomew, worked between 1490 and 1500. Also called the Master of the Altar of St. Thomas and of the Altar of the Cross; from two pictures in the Museum of Cologne.

48. (631.) In the centre St. Bartholomew, with book and knife; on the left St. Agnes reading in a book; on the right St. Cecilia playing upon a small organ which is held by an angel. Centre piece of the two following panels.

Wood. — 1.28 m h., 1.59 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by N. Strixner, of Bergmann and Heindel. Phot. by Hanfstängl. The picture, with its two following wings was originally in the Church of St. Columba at Cologne. Ascribed by A. v. Wurzbach (comp. his Martin Schongauer, Wien, 1880 p. 61 etc.) to Schongauer. For a contrary opinion see C. A. Scheibler. (Repert. d. Kunstw. VII. 1.) — Hall II.

49. (630.) St. Christina with millstone and two arrows. St. James Minor with club and book. Right wing of the preceding.

Wood. — 1.28 m h., 0.74 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. and phot. as above. — Hall II.

50. (632.) St. John the Evangelist invoking the cup, St. Margaret with the cross in her hands, and the dragon at her feet. Left wing of the preceding.

Wood. — 1.28 m h., 0.74 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. and phot. as above. — Hall II.

Lower Rhenish, about 1500.

51. (685.) The Flight into Egypt. St. Joseph leads the ass upon which sits the Virgin with the Child.

Wood. — 0.54 m h., 0.39 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by Jungermeier. Cab. 3.

52. (682.) The Bearing of the Cross. Christ fallen under the burden of the cross, which Simon helps to carry, stretches forth his hand for the handkerchief held towards him by St. Veronica, who kneels at the left. In the right foreground two mocking boys.

Wood. — 0.73 m h., 0.57 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by Strixner and Heindel. — Cab. 1.

53. (653.) The Saviour, teaching, in a purple mantle, holding the crystal globe. Breast piece, full face.

Wood, black-dotted gold-ground. — 0.52 m h., 0.37 m br. — Acquired in 1802 from Mannlich. — Cab. 1.

54. (659.) The Virgin, with folded hands, and head covered with white drapery. Breast piece, full face. Companion piece to the preceding.

Wood, black dotted gold-ground. — 0.52 m h., 0.37 m br. — Acquired in 1802 from Mannlich. — Cab. 1.

Master of the Death of the Virgin, and his School.

This master, named after the following picture — perhaps a pupil of Jan Joest van Kalkar — seems to have been of Dutch descent, and to have been influenced by Quentin Massys. He worked chiefly in Cologne, between 1510 and 1530.

55. (662.) The Death of the Virgin. The Virgin lies in a canopied bed, with red curtains and a red covering. St. John, with a blessing, takes the candle from her right hand; St. Peter kneels upon the other side, in a pluvial, with cross and sprinkle, while other apostles bring the holy water, swing the censer, or stand deep in sorrow or in prayer. Room of the Renaissance style; at the left an altar, through the door and window the view of a town.

Wood. — 1.27 m h., 1.54 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by N. Strixner. Engr. by H. Walde in E. Förster's Denkmäler d. d. Kunst. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — This picture and the two following wing pieces were originally in the Church of St. Mary of the Capitol in Cologne. They were a gift to the so-called Toxal Altar of that Church by the families Hacquenay, Salm, Merlo and Hardenrath. A smaller repetition of this altar piece, with the centre picture considerably changed, taken from the private chapel of the Hacquenay family (comp. Merlo, Familie Hacquenay und deren Kunstliebe) is now in the City Museum of Cologne, (No. 207). We need not necessarily accept the date 1515, carved in the frame of this latter work, for the Munich triptych, which seems rather to be ascribed to the later period of the sculptures of the lecturn in the Church of the Capitol, dated 1523. — Hall II.

56. (661.) St. George and St. Nicasius; under their protection, kneeling, are two donors of the Hacquenay family, in dark steel armor. Background, romantic landscape. Upon

Wood. — 1.27 m h., 1.70 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by N. Strixner. — Hall II.

57. (663.) St. Christina with the millstone and St. Gudula with a lighted lantern, to which a little imp is holding. In front kneel two women of the families of Merlo and Hardenrath. Background, romantic landscape. On the prayer-desk and in the right corner is a coat-of-arms with three little caps, and another with three ravens, both upon a blue ground. Upon the reverse, gray in gray: St. Sebastian and St. Roch; above, at the left, the coat-of-arms with the three caps. Figures half life-size. Right wing-piece to the two preceding pictures.

Wood. — 1.27 m h., 0.70 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by N. Strixner, by the same the half-figure of St. Christina on a larger scale. Both the wings phot. by Hanfstängl. Hall II.

58. (686.) Christ upon the Cross; on the right the Virgin, on the left St. John; St. Magdalen clasps the foot of the cross. Three angels receive the blood in a cup. Background, varied landscape. School copy of the central picture of a triptych in the Museum at Naples. (V. 53).

Wood. — 0.76 m h., 0.57 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by Strixner and Schöninger. — Cab. 2.

59. (656.) The Repose upon the Flight into Egypt. The Virgin sitting, in a gray-violet dress, with a bright-red mantle, offers her breast to the Child. Varied landscape. On the right, in the middle-distance, is St. Joseph under trees with the grazing ass. School of this master.

Wood. — 0.61 m h., 0.46 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by Bergmann. — Cab. 2.

Master of Frankfort, so called from his chief works in the City and Städel Museum of Frankfort on the Main. Apparently influenced by Quentin Massys. Worked about 1520.

60. (702.) The Deposition. The body of Christ, lies upon the ground, under the cross, held by Joseph of Arimathea, mourned by the Holy Women and by John and Nicodemus. Three angels float above. In the background, Jerusalem with Gothic towers; on the left Mount Calvary with the Crucifixion. Centre-piece to the following.

Wood, curved above. — 1.02 m h., 0.70 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by Strixner and Schöninger. — This triptych was originally in the Church of the Carthusians in Cologne. The identification of this master with Konrad Fyoll, who worked before 1500, is an error on the part of Passavant. — Cab. 2.

Victor and Henry Dünwegge, according to the Chronicum Dominicarum Tremonensium worked in 1521 for the Fraternity of the Holy Cross at Dortmund in Westphalia. (Comp.: Woltmann-Woermann Gesch. d. Mal. II. 500—502. — L. Scheibler, Maler und Bildschnitzer der sog. Schule von Kalkar. Zeitsch. f. b. K. XVIII. p. 28 ff.)

63. (91.) The Crucifixion. A composition with many figures. The three crosses with Christ and the Thieves; at the right four horsemen, at the left the Holy Women with St. John and St. Longinus the Centurion. In the background, on the left, the Bearing of the Cross and Jerusalem; on the right, the Descent from the Cross, with John and Mary. About 1500.

Wood. — 1.29 m h., 1.67 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Formerly ascribed to C. Engelbrechtsens; the correct attribution is due to Eisenmann and Scheibler. — Hall II.

64. (85.) The body of Christ borne by Joseph of Arimathea and Nicodemus; on the left is St. Peter, on the right St. John the Evangelist. Behind the group the two thieves on their crosses, and, at the foot of the central cross, Mary with John. In the foreground kneel the donor and donatrice.

Wood. — 1.29 m h., 1.00 m br. — Derivation unknown. — Formerly attributed to Geraert of Haarlem; ascribed by Scheibler to a follower of the Master of the Holy Companionship, but appears more nearly related to the style of the Dünwegges. — Hall II.

Westphalian, about 1500. (Master of Cappenberg).

65. (Schl. 1317.) The Crucifixion. Christ upon the cross, between the two thieves, is pierced by the lance of the blind Longinus. The Magdalen, kneeling, clasps the foot of the cross; from her mouth issue the words in gold letters: amor meus crucifixus est.

Wood. — 0.52 m h., 0.38 m br. — Repetition, on a smaller scale, of the Altar piece in the Church of Cappenberg. — Zweibrücken Gallery. — Cab. 3.

Anton (Woensam) of Worms, worked in Cologne from 1518 to 1553; died in that city before the year 1561.

66. (Schl. 1331.) St. Stephen and St. Maurice. Figures of half life-size standing in a landscape. The gold ground of the sky has been painted over in modern times. Below, on the right, is inscribed: 1520. Upon the reverse: the Beheading of a great number of Martyrs. The bodies are thrown into a well in the middle distance. In the background a city with many towers. Above is Christ receiving the souls. Below, on the right, is inscribed: 1520.

Wood. — 1.36 m h. 1.04 m br. — Came into the possession of the State in 1802 from Freising. The centre-piece belonging to Nos. 66 and 67, representing Christ upon the Cross with Constantine and Helena on either side, is now in the Episcopal College at Freising. — Hall II.

67. (Schl. 1332.) St. Wolfgang (?) and St. Gregory the Moor; the former with the episcopal insignia, holding in his right hand the model of a Romanic cathedral, probably that of St. Gereon in Cologne; the latter in armor, with shield and banner. Background, landscape, with gold-ground in place of sky. Upon the reverse: a Martyrdom. In the foreground sit three soldiers carousing over three dead bodies; in the background, a saint riding a horse is assailed by another group of soldiers. Background, landscape. Above, God the Father receives the souls borne upwards by angels. At the left, below, is inscribed: 1520. Companion-piece of the preceding.

Wood. — 1.36 m h., 1.04 m br. — Came into the possession of the State in 1802 from Freising. — Hall II.

Bartholomew Bruyn (Brun), and his School, born in Cologne 1493, died in that city in 1556 or 1557. Imitator of the Master of the Death of the Virgin; afterwards influenced by the Italian style.

68. (670.) Christ upon the Cross. On the right is the Virgin in the attitude of prayer; on the left St. John and St. Barbara. The Magdalen, weeping, clasps the foot of the cross. Background, landscape with a view of Jerusalem. Below are the three donors, among whom is a white-robed monk. Early period.

Wood. — 0.95 m h., 0.73 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — This panel is the centre-piece of an altar from the Church of the Carthusians at Cologne, of which the four following numbers are the wings. — Cab. 2.

69. (671.) A bishop, with a lance in the right hand, and the model of a Romanic church in the left. Perhaps Lambert, Bishop of Tongres. Below kneels the donatrice. Background, landscape. Left wing-piece of the preceding.

Wood. — 0.95 m h., 0.32 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by Strixner. — Cab. 2.

70. (673.) St. Agnes, reading in a book. Before her kneels the donatrice. Background, landscape. Right wing-piece of the preceding.

Wood. — 0.95 m h., 0.32 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by Strixner. — Cab. 2.

71. (672.) Emperor Henry the Holy, in a mantle over his armor, with sword and the model of a church. Half gray-in-gray. Background, architecture. On the right, below, upon a shield the following signs, which probably relate to the donors.

No. 69.

Wood. — 0.95 m h., 0.32 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by Strixner. — Cab. 2.

72. (674.) St. Helena with cross and book. Half gray-in-gray. Background, architecture. On the left, below, upon a shield, the following signs, which probably relate to the donors.

Separated reverse of No. 70.

Wood. — 0.95 m h., 0.32 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by Strixner. — Cab. 2.

Wood. — 0.87 m h., 0.27 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by J. Bergmann. — Nos. 73 and 74 are parts of an otherwise unknown triptych. Early period. — Cab. 2.

74. (669.) St. Agnes, leading with the right hand a lamb by a red ribbon, in her left an open book. Behind her a

Wood. — 0.87 m h., 0.27 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Cab. 2.

75. (705.) The Deposition. At the foot of the cross St. John holds the body, surrounded by the mourning women. Joseph of Arimathea and Nicodemus. Background, landscape; in a grotto at the right the Entombment. Centre-piece of the two following wings.

Wood. — 1.12 m h., 0.78 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by Strixner. — Formed, with the four following wing-pieces a chapel altar in the Collegiate Church of St. Kunibert at Cologne. — Hall II.

76. (704.) St. Stephen, standing to the right. Before him kneels the ecclesiastical donor; at his feet, a shield with a coat-of-arms. Background, landscape.

Wood. — 1.12 m h., 0.32 m br. — Boiss.-Coll. — Lith. by Strixner. — Hall II.

77. (706.) St. Gereon, with banner and shield, standing, to the left. Before him kneels an ecclesiastical donor; at his feet, a shield with a coat-of-arms. Background, landscape.

Wood. — 1.12 m h., 0.32 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by Strixner. — Hall II.

78. (765.) St. Cunibert, with crozier and the model of a church. Full figure, to the right, standing in a niche. Separated reverse of No. 76.

Wood. — 1.12 m h., 0.32 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Hall II.

79. (676.) St. Swibert, with the crozier, holding in his hand an eight-pointed star. Full figure, to the left, standing in a niche. Separated reverse of No. 77.

Wood. — 1.12 m h., 0.32 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Hall II.

80. (664.) St. Benedict with the abbot's staff, book in hand, to the right. Background, brocade drapery.

Wood. — 0.73 m h., 0.25 m br. — This panel with Nos. 81, 82 and 83, also the Virgin with the Child, and the St. Anna in the Germanic Museum in Nuremberg, (Nos. 54 and 55) belong to one altar-piece, probably from the Church of St. Barbara in Cologne. — Cab. II.

81. (665.) St. Catharine, standing, to the right; the donor kneels before her. On the right, in the corner below, is the coat-of-arms of the Rinck family. Background, landscape with the Martyrdom of the Saints. See No. 80.

Wood. — 0.73 m h., 0.25 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by Strixner and Heindel. Upon the back is the same figure as upon panel No. 73, with the inscription »Joncker Herman Rinck«, who was probably the donor of these pictures. — Cab. II.

82. (667.) St. Barbara, standing, to the left. Before her kneels the donatrice with the coat-of-arms of the Kannegiesser family. Background, landscape. See No. 80.

Wood. — 0.73 m h., 0.25 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by Strixner and Heindel. Upon the reverse, in modern text, is the name: »Jonffer Sibilla Kannegiesser«, with the remark that upon the frame of the centre-piece, which represented Christ before Pilate, had been inscribed »Jonffer Catharina Rinck.« Kannegiesser and Rinck were names of old Cologne families. — Cab. 2.

83. (666.) St. Maurice in full armor, with shield and banner, upon which latter is an eagle; to the left. Background, brocade drapery. See No. 80.

Wood. — 0.73 m h., 0.25 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by Strixner. — Cab. 2.

84. (687.) Emperor Henry the Holy, in golden armor, with the model of the Cathedral of Bamberg. St. Helena with the cross. Before them kneel the donor and his four sons. View of a landscape through a hall with columns. Upon the reverse: an Ecce Homo, with many figures.

Wood. — 1.07 m h., 0.78 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by Strixner and Heindel. Nos. 84 and 85 are wings of a triptych from the Church of St. John the Baptist in Cologne; of which the centre-piece, a Crucifixion, is in the Germanic Museum in Nuremberg (No. 56). — Hall II.

85. (688.) St. John the Evangelist, with the cup in the right hand. St. Catharine with the sword. Before them kneel the wife of the donor and her four daughters. View of a landscape through a hall with columns. Upon the reverse: a Crucifixion. See No. 84.

Wood. — 1.07 m h., 0.78 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by Strixner. — Hall II.

86. (84.) Christ taking leave of the Virgin. In the foreground six male members of the donor's family. Left wing-piece.

Wood. — 1.29 m h., 0.43 m br. — Derivation unknown. — Hall II.

87. (86.) The Resurrection of Christ. In the foreground seven female members of the donor's family. Right wing-piece. See No. 86.

Wood. — 1.29 m h., 0.43 m br. — Derivation unknown. — Hall II.

88. (696.) St. Barbara with the tower; a feather, instead of a palm branch, in her hand. Breast-piece, to the left. Upon the reverse: the head of the Virgin, from an Annunciation, cut from an altar panel.

Wood. — 0.19 m h., 0.28 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by Strixner. — Nos. 88 and 89 were formerly attributed to M. Coxie; the ascription to B. Bruyn is not assured. — Cab. 2.

89. (695.) St. Catharine reading in a book. Breast-piece, to the left. Upon the reverse: the angel of the Annunciation, with a long golden staff. Companion-piece to the preceding.

Wood. — 0.39 m h., 0.28 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by Strixner. — Cab. 2.

90. (684.) Portrait of a beardless man in a black dress and black cap, his right hand placed upon an open book which bears his coat-of-arms, and lies upon a table covered with green. Breast-piece. At the back a skeleton looks out from behind a green curtain. Curved above. School of this master.

Wood. — 0.50 m h., 0.35 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by Strixner. — Cab. 2.

Hans van Melem,

Cologne master, of the first third of the sixteenth century; known only by the following picture.

91. (680.) Portrait of the artist in the thirty-seventh year of his age, with a coat of brown fur and a black cap. Breast-piece. On the right a convex mirror, in which the reflection of the head is visible. Through a window at the left is a view of a round tower, before which is a galloping horseman. Upon the wall is the following inscription:

huic tabule e Melem forma Joannis inest.

Hoc opus ecce novum construxit valde peritus.

Wood, curved above. — 0.54 m h., 0.34 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by Strixner and L. Freymann. — Cab. 2.

School of Cologne, about 1520.

92. (1354.) Family portrait. A father with his four sons, all dressed in black, with silver chains around the necks. Ground of dark green. Curved above.

Wood. — 0.78 m h., 0.61 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Cab. 2.

93. (1355.) Family portrait. A mother with her four daughters, all in black dresses with buckled girdles. Companion-piece to No. 92.

Wood. — 0.78 m h., 0.61 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Cab. 2.

Lower Rhenish, about 1520.

94. (732.) Portrait of a thinly bearded man, dressed in black, in a cap with narrow brim and a plume, who is occu-

Lower Rhenish, about 1550.

95. (726.) Portrait of a man with a brown beard, gray hair, and red hat. Breast-piece to the right.

Wood. — 0.38 m h., 0.28 m br. — Zweibrücken Gallery. Etched by H. Hess as the portrait of H. Holbein by himself. — Cab. 2.

Wood. — 0.32 m h., 0.25 m br. — Mannheim Gallery. Old copy of a picture by A. Moor with the above mentioned name in the Museum of Aix-la-Chapelle. — Cab. 2.

Copies after Hubert van Eyck by Michiel van Coxie (Coxcyen), born in Mechlin 1499, died in that city March 1592. Pupil of B. van Orley; after many years spent in Italy, worked chiefly in Brussels.

97. (55.) The Virgin, as Queen of Heaven, in a blue mantle with a rich border, and a crown upon her hair, which flows loosely over her shoulders; she is reading in a book. Full figure, life-size, sitting, turned slightly towards the right. In the background, at half-height, a brocade tapestry of rich pattern; above this in a semicircle: HEC E SPECIOSIOR SOLE &c.

Wood, rounded above, gold-ground. — 1.62 m h., 0.70 m br. — Lith. by Strixner. — This, with the following panel, belonged to the copy made for King Philip II of Spain, from the altar-piece at Ghent originally painted by the brothers Hubert and Jan van Eyck (1420—1432) for the Vydt family. It was brought from the Chapel of the Old Palace at Madrid, in 1809, by Gen. Belliard to Brussels, where, with the following painting, it was purchased, in 1820, by Max Joseph, King of Bavaria. The panels, with the Lamb of the Apocalypse and the Saviour enthroned, were bought, in 1823, for the Berlin Museum; while the six remaining pictures: the two Chorusses of Angels, the Just Judges, the Champions of Christ and the Hermits and the Pilgrims, still remain attached to the Altar of the van Eyck's in S. Bavo, where only the central pictures are original. — Hall II.

Copy after Jan van Eyck.

Jan van Eyck, born after 1380, in Maaseyck in the vicinity of Limburg, died in Bruges July 9th, 1440. Pupil of his brother Hubert van Eyck, in the service of Duke John of Bavaria at the Hague (1422—24), afterwards of Duke Philip the Good in Lille; journeyed with the embassy of the latter to Portugal from October 19th, 1428 to December 25th, 1429; after January 1430 in Bruges. The Altar of Ghent was completed in 1432.

99. (643.) Head of Christ, life-size, full face.

Wood. — 0.50 m h., 0.37 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by Strixner. — Fifteenth century copy after the original, now in Berlin, dated Jan. 31st, 1438. — Cab. 3.

School of Jan van Eyck.

219. (750.) Portrait of a Scholar, beardless, and with gray hair, holding a pair of compasses in his right hand. He wears a dark red cap with brim turned up, and a red mantle, trimmed with gray fur, over a black undergarment, the edge of which is visible at the neck.

On oak wood. — 0.38 m h., 0.31 m br. Was formerly in the Rechberg and Wallerstein Collections. Upon the back is an erroneous inscription of later date: »Petrus Appianus, Caroli V Mathematicus« and »FB 1509«. — Cab. II.

Rogier van der Weyden, born in Tournai, 1399 or 1400, died in Brussels, June 16th, 1464. After 1426 pupil of Robert Campin in Tournai; founder of the Brabantine school, made master of the Guild in Tournai in 1432, appointed city painter of Brussels in 1436 — in Italy in 1450. Worked in Brussels and, for a time, in Louvain.

100. (634.) St. Luke, the Evangelist, drawing the portrait of the Madonna, who sits opposite to him in an open hall, under a canopy of brocade, and offers her breast to the Child. An opening between two Gothic columns presents a view of a small grass plot on the inner side of a city wall, over the battlements of which a man and a woman look down upon the busy streets of the town, and upon a river. Figures half-life-size.

Wood. — 1.38 m h., 1.11 m br. — Came into the Boiss. Coll. from the Chapel of the Guild of St. Luke in Brussels. — Lith. by N. Strixner. Etched by J. L. Raab. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall II.

101. (628.) The Adoration of the Magi. The Virgin sits with the Child in a thatched ruin, above which shines the star. The eldest king, who kneeling, does homage by kissing the hand of the Child, is said to be the portrait of Philip the Good of Burgundy, and the proud Ethiopian prince standing behind him has the features of Charles the Bold. The unknown donor is placed in the picture behind St. Joseph. In the background is a varied landscape, with a street of a Flemish city, full of life and action. Figures half life-size. Centre-piece of Nos. 102 and 103.

Wood. — 1.38 m h., 1.53 m br. — Came into the Boiss. Coll. from St. Columba in Cologne. — Lith. by Strixner and Bergmann. Engr. by R. Petzsch in E. Förster's Denkmale der deutschen Kunst. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall II.

102. (627.) The Annunciation. The Virgin, kneeling before a prayer-desk, receives the message of Gabriel, who descends before her in a white pluvial, bearing a herald's staff of gold. On the prayer desk the Fall of Adam is painted as a relief. Figures half life-size. Right wing-piece of Nr. 101.

Wood. — 1.38 m h., 0.70 m br. — Derivation and reproductions like the preceding. — Hall II.

103. (629.) The Presentation in the Temple. Simeon, bending the knee before the Virgin, receives the Child over the altar; behind him is the aged prophetess Hannah; upon the other side St. Joseph with the light, and a woman with doves. The scene takes place in a domed church in the transitional style, resembling St. Gereon in Cologne, at the entrance of which stands a begging cripple. Above the Child is inscribed, in capital letters of gold, the following: nunc dimittis servum tuum domine secundum verbum tuum in pace. Figures half life-size. Left wing picture of No. 101.

Wood. — 1.20 m h., 0.70 m br. — Derivation and reproductions like No. 100. — Hall II.

Successor of Rogier van der Weyden.

104. (1352.) The Descent from the Cross. Joseph of Arimathea, standing upon the ladder, holds the body under the arms, while Nicodemus, below, receives the feet. On the left are the Holy Women and St. John; on the right the Captain and his followers. Background: hilly landscape with Jerusalem.

Wood. — 0.57 m h., 0.52 m br. — Came into the possession of the State from Freising in 1802. — Cab. 2.

105. (694.) The Virgin, in a white head-dress over which is a blue mantle. The right hand is upraised, while the left rests upon her breast. A glory of worshipping angels float above her. Curved above.

Wood and gold-ground. — 0.80 m h., 0.52 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by Strixner. — Old copy of a painting in the Araceli in Rome. (J. Weale.) — Cab. 3.

106. (657.) Christ with the Crown of Thorns; in a red garment, the left hand upon the breast, the right uplifted. Breast-piece, to the left. School of this master.

Wood, dark ground. — 0.55 m h., 0.35 m br. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — From the Castle Ambras in the Tyrol. — Cab. 3.

Dierick Bouts, called Dirk van Haarlem, also Dieric de Louvain; born, (according to van Mander) in Haarlem after 1400, died May 6th, 1475 in Louvain, where, after 1468, he held the office of city-painter. Probably a pupil of Rogier; founder of the School of Louvain.

107. (641.) The Adoration of the Magi. The aged king, kneeling, has placed his crystal vase upon a low table; the second king holds towards St. Joseph the golden cup; the third, with his followers, is outside the ruin, which is fitted up as a manger. Behind the Virgin stands a serving maid. Background: landscape with the city of Jerusalem. Centre-piece of Nos. 108 and 109.

Wood. — 0.61 m h., 0.61 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — This, with the two following pictures are from the private chapel of the Snoy family in Mechlen. — Lith. by Strixner. Engr. by H. Walde in E. Förster's Denkmalen der deutschen Kunst. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Cab. 3.

108. (640.) St. John the Baptist in a violet mantle over a dress of skins, stands in a landscape, bearing upon a book the Lamb of God, towards which he points with his right hand. The valley, surrounded by cliffs, opens, in the background a view of a distant city. In the foreground, on the left, sits a kingfisher by a spring, near which sprouts a lily. Upon the reverse: St. Catherine, gray in gray. Left wingpiece of No. 107.

Wood. — 0.61 m h., 0.26 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Reproductions same as the preceding. — Cab. 3.

109. (642.) St. Christopher carrying the Child, in the act of blessing, upon his shoulders through a stream, lighted on his way by a hermit who stands on a high rocky bank on the right. In the distance a romantic shore, the dusky sky streaked with light clouds. Upon the reverse: St. Barbara with the tower and palm; gray in gray. Right wing-piece of No. 107.

Wood. — 0.61 m h., 0.26 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Reproductions like No. 107. — Cab. 3.

110. (647.) The Priest Melchizedek, King of Salem, brings bread and wine to the Patriarch Abram. To the left of Melchizedek a priest and two donors, to the right of Abram an armor-bearer; behind, through a narrow way, come the followers. In the background a city.

Wood. — 0.86 m h., 0.69 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by Strixner and Heindel. Engr. by H. Walde in E. Förster's Denkmäler der deutschen Kunst. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — This, with the following painting, and the two panels representing the Feast of the Passover, and Elijah fed by the ravens, now in the Museum at Berlin, are from an altar-piece given by the Brothers of the Holy Sacrament to the Church of St. Peter in Louvain, where the centre-piece, with the Last Supper, still remains. The four paintings in Munich and Berlin formed the inner side of the wings. Their attribution to Bouts is certified by the still existing receipt for payment given by the master in 1467. (Comp.: Crowe & Cavalcaselle, Gesch. der niederl. Mal. German Edition p. 369.) — Cab. 3.

111. (636.) The Israelites gathering manna at sunrise in a hilly landscape. The group in the foreground comprises three figures kneeling, one standing, and a child. In the clouds appears God the Father. Companion-piece to the preceding.

Wood. — 0.86 m h., 0.69 m br. — Derivation and reproductions like No. 110. — Cab. 3.

112. (650.) The Seizure of Christ. Judas kisses the Redeemer while a member of the Sanhedrim, in the crowd, seizes him by the breast, and a soldier takes him by the arm. St. Peter, in the left foreground, draws his sword against Malchus, who cowers upon the ground. In the middle distance, on the left, St. John and St. James, on the right Jesus led before Pilate. Moonlight and torchlight.

Wood. — 1.04 m h., 0.67 m br. — Obtained, in 1822, from Schreiber, a picture dealer in Cologne. This picture, with the Resurrection of Christ, now in the Germanic Museum in Nuremberg, (No. 21.) and with the two monochromatic works, the St. John the Evangelist, No. 113 in the Munich Pinakothek, and the St. John the Baptist in Wörlitz from the collection of H. W. Campe in Leipzig, belong to an altar-piece of which the remaining parts have disappeared. (Scheibler, die anonymen M. u. W. der Kölner Malerschule. Bonn 1880, p. 19.) — Hall II.

113. (Schl. 1342.) St. John the Evangelist blessing the cup. Monochromatic painting of a sandstone figure upon a dark green pedestal in a rectangular niche.

Wood. — 1.06 m h., 0.85 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Reverse of the companion-piece to the preceding, namely: the Resurrection of Christ, now in the Germanic Museum in Nuremberg. Compare note to No. 112. — Cab. 3.

Hugo van der Goes, born, perhaps in Ghent, where he became master of the Guild in 1465, worked long in Bruges and died in 1482 as laybrother in the Rooden Cloister of the Augustine Choir-Masters in the Forest of Soignies near Brussels, whither he had retired in 1476.

114. (635.) The Annunciation. The Virgin has risen from her prayer before an altar in the corner niche, and receives, standing, the message of the angel who is robed in a pluvial of green brocade. View of a landscape through the window of an ante-room. On the wall are circular pictures: The Flood and Gideon with the unwet goat-skin. In the tracery of the middle window are three shields with coats-of-arms, the central one of which has a white horizontal band upon a red ground; that on the left, pertaining to the Guild, has three white shields upon a blue ground, and over these two arrows crossed on a white field; the one on the right has the following sign:

Wood. — 1.15 m h., 1.07 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by Heindel.
— Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Cab. 3.

Hans Memling

(Memlinc, Memmelinck) probably of German descent, birthplace unknown; died before Dec. 10th, 1495 in Bruges, where he had been settled since 1471. Pupil of Rogier van der Weyden.

115. (697.) St. John the Baptist, with a red mantle over a hairy garment, in a landscape, sitting upon a rock near a spring and pointing to the Lamb which lies upon the grass on the right. Behind, at the left; a wood with a pond from which a stag is drinking. Cliffs upon the right.

Wood. — 0.31 m h., 0.24 m br. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — From the estate of King Max I. The later inscription in gold letters: H. V. D. GOES, 1472, is spurious. Probably part of a diptych which was preserved, early in the sixteenth century, in the house of Pietro Bembo, at Padua. Comp. Frizzoni, Notizia d'Opere di Disegno. Bol. 1884. — Cab. 3.

116. (655.) The Seven Joys of the Virgin. The scene of this Christian epic, in cyclical representation, is an extensive landscape, in the centre of which stands the city of Jerusalem with its many towers. In the foreground: the Adoration of the Magi; on the left the Nativity, on the right the Resurrection, and the Assemblage at Whitsuntide. In the background: the Annunciation to the Shepherds, the Journeying of the Kings through various valleys, and their Reembarkment upon the sea; their Visit to Herod, the Massacre of the Innocents and the Flight into Egypt. Upon the other side the Women at the Sepulchre; the Appearance of Christ among the Women and Disciples, taking leave of his Mother, his Ascension, the Death of the Virgin and her Reception in Heaven, and, finally, upon the most distant mountain peaks of the background, the kneeling figures of the Three Kings, who gaze at the Star of Bethlehem.

Wood. — 0.80 m h., 1.80 m br. — Lith. by Strixner and Freymann. Engr. by E. Schäffer and for E. Förster's Denkmale der deutschen Kunst, by R. Peztsch. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — This panel was originally in the Chapel of the Tanners at Bruges, where it had been dedicated in 1480. It was taken thence during the eighth decade of the last century, and presented by the Guild to the Austrian Governor General of Brabant. In 1813 it passed from the possession of the Brion family at Brussels to the collection of the Boisserée Brothers. — The picture now in Turin, known as the Seven Sorrows of the Virgin, with the scenes of the Passion, is of such different dimensions that it cannot be considered as a companion-piece. The designation of these pictures as the Seven Joys and the Seven Sorrows of the Virgin is questionable, especially in regard to the latter. (Comp. Jameson, Legends of the Mad. 1852 p. LX, Weale, Beffroi II 267 and Taurel's Christelyke Kunst in Holland &c. I. p. 137. Weale calls the Munich picture »Le Christ la lumière du monde»; Michiels, Memling, Verviers p. 97 »les triomphes du Christ«). — Cab. 3.

Gerard David,

called David of Bruges, born at Ouwater in Southern Holland about 1450, entered the Guild of Bruges as master in 1484, died in that city Aug. 13th, 1523. Influenced by Hans Memling.

117. (1347.) In an enclosed garden, beyond which is seen a hilly landscape, sits the Virgin with the Child upon her lap, who holds in the left hand a pink, and reaches with the right for the ring presented to him by the kneeling St. Catherine. Upon the opposite side, St. Gertrude, also kneeling, offers her ducal crown. In the left foreground St. Cunigunde is reading in a book, and St. Barbara turning the leaves of a book upon her lap. On the right St. Gudula, patroness of Brussels, with book and cross. In the foreground St. Agnes with rosary and lamb.

Wood. — 1.61 m h., 1.56 m br. — From the Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — This composition in its most characteristic features appears in the authenticated work of G. David in Rouen, as well as in one of the miniatures of the Breviarium Grimani in Venice and elsewhere. According to J. Weale it is the work of a successor to David, possibly of Adriaen Isenbaert, who died in 1551. — Cab. 3.

118. (45.) The Adoration of the Magi. Upon the right sits the Virgin with the Child before a romantic ruin. Near her stands St. Joseph, and two angels float above the group. On the left are the adoring kings with their followers, some of whom, in the background, are busied with their horses in the streets of Bethlehem.

Wood. — 1.21 m h., 1.64 m br. — Lith. by Strixner and Heindel. Engr. by Carl Hess in 1823. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Acquired from Lieutenant General Cornet von Rechberg in 1818. An old copy is in the Museum at Berlin, (No. 546). The ascription of this picture to David is questioned by J. Weale. — Hall II.

Pierre des Mares, a Burgundian painter; worked in the beginning of the 16th century. His style resembles that of the Master of the Holy Companionship.

119. (30.) The Crucifixion. A picture with numerous figures; many noble riders, six holy women, and St. John. In the left foreground lies a dog. Centre-piece of the two following panels. Signed upon the green robe of one of the women who support the Virgin: DES MARES · PIERRE · 1517

Wood, and gold-ground. — 1.27 m h., 2.26 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — This picture with its two wings, Nos. 120 and 121, formed the high altar of St. Maurice in Cologne. — Hall II.

120. (29.) St. Maurice, (name upon the border of his vest) at the head of the Theban Legion, refuses to sacrifice to an idol which sits in a vaulted hall, with a dolphin in the right hand and an arrow in the left. Upon the reverse: the Trinity. The body of Christ in the lap of the Father, with the feet resting upon the floating globe. Two angels hold open the mantle of the Father; others bear the instruments of the Passion. Below, on the left, kneels an abbot as donor. Left wing-piece of Nr. 119.

Wood, gold-ground. — 1.24 m h., 1.07 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Hall II.

121. (31.) The Beheading of St. Maurice, who kneels upon his purple mantle. (Name upon the border of his vest.) On the right the martyrs are led to their death, on the left the Emperor and his followers upon horses. Upon the reverse: The Virgin as Queen of Heaven, with the Child upon her lap, standing upon the crescent. Above is a circle of adoring angels; below, on the right, kneels an abbess as donatrice. Right wing-piece of No. 119.

Wood, gold-ground. — 1.24 m h., 1.07 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by J. Bergmann. — Hall II.

Dutch, about 1500.

122. (711.) The Virgin sits under a stone tabernacle, of late Gothic style, with the Child upon her lap, who reaches with the left hand for an apple held towards him by the mother, and with the right for a flower, brought by an angel.

Wood. — 0.70 m h., 0.49 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by Strixner. — A later copy of this picture, dated 1644, with side wings, is in the church of St. Salvator in Bruges, (J. Weale). — Cab. 2.

123. (658.) The Virgin with St. John and the three Holy Women, in deep sorrow. Half figures. Fragment of a Crucifixion.

Wood. — 0.50 m h., 0.39 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by Strixner. — Cab. 1.

124. (1284.) Events from the legends of the hermits Anthony and Paul. In the foreground the two hermits conversing together near a spring, while a raven brings them food; behind them is their first greeting at the hermitage of St. Paul. Farther in the background the following scenes: St. Anthony leaves the city attended by two lions; the way is pointed out by a centaur; he visits St. Paul in the desert; is tempted by devils in all shapes; with the help of the lions he buries the body of St. Paul; and finally dies in the desert. In the right corner of the picture kneels the ecclesiastical donor, with the blue cross of St. Anthony upon his breast.

Wood. — 2.00 m h., 3.00 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — The style of this picture in similar, in some respects, to that of the Master of the Holy Companion-ship. — Cab. 1.

Dutch, about 1510.

125. (638.) The Virgin, sitting within an enclosure of roses and blue iris, is surrounded by four angels playing, one upon the organ, another upon the harp and two upon lutes. One of the latter offers an apple to the Child. Belongs, with No. 126, to a small triptych.

Wood. — 0.40 m h., 0.29 m br. — Zweibrücken Gallery. — Cab. 2.

Wood. — 0.40 m h., 0.27 m br. — Zweibrücken Gallery. — Cab. 2.

127. (689.) Christ upon the Cross between the two thieves. St. Magdalen kneels at the foot of the cross, clasping it; on the left the Virgin with two holy women; behind is St. John; on the right soldiers mocking. In the background Jerusalem; on the left, Christ floating downwards to Limbo, on the right, the Descent from the Cross. In the predella the Scourging and Crowning with Thorns.

Wood, curved above. — 1.65 m h., 1.45 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by Bergmann. — Formerly the central picture of a triptych in a church in Mechlin. — Hall II.

Dutch, about 1520.

128. (679.) The Virgin, sitting before a canopy upheld by angels, holds the Child upon her lap, to whom St. Margaret offers an apple. On the right St. Dorothea reading in a book. Behind the throne a throng of angels. Upon a stone bench in front lies the open book of St. Margaret and stands St. Dorothea's basket of roses.

Wood. — 0.54 m h., 0.41 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by Strixner and Lauter. — Similar to the early works of Bartel de Bruyn. — Cab. 1.

129. (678.) See between 146 and 147.

130. (81.) Christ upon the Cross, surrounded by the Holy Women and St. John; angels receive the blood. On the left the Holy Women and St. John; on the right soldiers and Jews. Background landscape.

Wood. — 1.07 m h., 0.83 m br. — Schleissheim Gallery. — A similar work, by the same hand, is in the Archiepiscopal Museum of Cologne. — Cab. 3.

Wood. — 0.48 m h., 0.35 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Cab. 3.

Quentin Massys,

born shortly before 1460 in Antwerp, died in that city 1530. In 1491 master of the Guild of St. Luke in Antwerp.

132. (96.) The Virgin Mary, sitting in a room, gives her breast to the Child. In the left background, the bed; on the right a kettle over an open fire. The condition of this picture does not admit of a satisfactory determination whether, as quite probable, it is an original, or whether it is the work of some pupil of this master. Knee-piece. Life-size.

Wood. — 0.89 m h., 0.70 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Hall II.

133. (74.) Portrait of Jehan Carondelet or Carondelet, President of the Ecclesiastical Council of Brussels and Chancellor of Flanders. In a black garment over a white choir-robe and wearing a black cap; he holds a book in both hands. The green background, which has a coat-of-arms with an inscribed scroll repeated amidst vegetable ornamentation, has, on the left, a picture of John the Baptist in a brown frame. Upon the reverse: the same coat-of-arms with:

OB A° ANA 1.5.4.3. FEB. 7^A ETATIS 7.6. NVDUM 2PLET.

Wood. — 0.50 m h., 0.45 m br. — Boiss.-Coll. — Lith. by Strixner and Lauter. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Formerly ascribed to the younger Holbein. (Comp. Bode, Repertorium VI. 405.) — Cab. 2.

134. (66.) Pietà. The Virgin holds upon her lap the body of the Saviour, whose head she presses to her cheek with both hands. In the left background is the grave and above it Golgotha; upon the right a view of the city. Knee-piece, life-size.

Wood. — 1.20 m h., 1.02 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Lith. by J. Piloty. Engr. by C. Preissel (1866). Phot. by Hanfstängl. — That the design of this picture is referable to Quentin Massys may be considered as certain; the character and technical execution of the work, especially of the landscape, indicate him rather than Lambert Lombard, or Joost van Clef, formerly suggested. Yet it cannot be denied that the Italian influence, clearly to be seen, appears to exceed the recognised development of Quentin Massys. The drawing in India ink, in the Dresden Cabinet of Engravings, is signed, in a later hand: Quentin Massys 1530. If this traditional signature be well grounded, it designates the year of the painter's death. — Hall II.

135. (644.) Ecce homo. Breast-piece; Christ, crowned with thorns, wearing a blue mantle.

Wood, goldground. — 0.37 m h., 0.26 m br. — Mannheim Gallery. — Lith. by Strixner. — School copy of an often repeated Mocking of Christ. — Cab. 3.

136. (80.) The Two Taxgatherers. One enters in an account-book the money taken, while the other, with the right hand upon the shoulder of the former, holds the purse in the left. Half figures.

Wood. — 0.89 m h., 0.26 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — This subject, of which the Galleria Zambeccari possesses the original picture by Quentin Massys, was often painted by his pupils. This example can make no claim to be an original work. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall II.

137. (677.) St. Jerome, sitting in a room amidst books and household utensils, points with the left hand to a skull.

Half life-size. Half figure. Through a window is seen a landscape with finely graduated distances.

Wood. — 1.01 m h., 0.87 m br. — Bought, in 1822, of the picture dealer Schreiber in Cologne. Good copy of the centre-piece of an old altar belonging to the Earl of Spencer in Althorp. Ascribed by Waagen to Bruyn. — Hall II.

Marinus (Seeuw) van Roymerswale, probably a pupil of Quentin Massys. Worked between 1520 and 1560.

138. (4.) A Moneychanger weighs coins, while his wife looks on and turns the leaves of an account-book. Half figures. Signed below on the left:

Reymerswale Maring me

Wood. — 0.67 m h., 1.03 m br. — Electoral-Gallery of Munich. Original design to be referred to Quentin Massys; often repeated by Marinus, — Cab. 3.

frut a° 38

139. (44.) A Taxgatherer in his business room, with a document in his left hand, smiling, gives information to an old man who empties his purse. A writer is working near him, and two other clients are listening in the background. Above, a shelf with documents. Signed below in the centre:

Moxing me f. rit a° 1642

Wood — 1.02 m h., 1.18 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall II.

Joachim Patinir (Patenier), born in Dinant; master of the Guild of St. Luke in Antwerp in 1515, died before 1524. Worked in Antwerp.

140. (762.) Christ upon the Cross; the Virgin on the right, St. John on the left wringing his hands; the Magdalen clasps the foot of the cross. In the distance, Joseph of Arimathea with a servant, carrying the ladder. The inscription on the right: 15Lo5 is not genuine.

Wood, curved above. — 0.85 m h., 0.70 m br. — Acquired, in 1834, from the estate of Count Rechberg. A smaller and better example is in the Liechtenstein Gallery at Vienna. — Cab. 2.

In the Manner of Patinir.

141. (713.) The Trinity. God the Father, with the triple crown upon the head, standing upon the globe in a glory of rays, holds in his arms the Saviour upon the cross. On the right floats the Dove.

Wood. — 0.90 m h., 0.39 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. This, with the two following panels, and the St. Sebastian in the Germanic Museum at Nuremberg. No. 63, belonged to one altar-piece. — Cab. 3.

142. (721.) The Virgin as Queen of Heaven, in a flamed mandorla, holds the Infant Jesus in her arms. Standing figure.

Wood. — 0.90 m h., 0.39 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Cab. 3.

143. (751.) St. Roch. Near him, on the right, the angel announcing the healing; before him the dog with the bread. In the background, a varied landscape. Upon the reverse: St. Anna standing in a red marble niche, partly gray in gray. Wing-piece, the companion to which, — a representation of St. Sebastian, — is in the Germanic Museum in Nuremberg.

Wood. — 0.90 m h., 0.39 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Cab. 2.

144. (Schl. 1341.) Landscape, with St. Hubert in the centre, who falls upon his knees before the stag. A servant leads the horse. In the middle distance, on the right, a hunt. In the background, a castle upon a cliff, with the return from the hunt.

Wood. — 0.60 m h., 0.85 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Cab. 2.

Herri (met de) Bles, called by the French Henri à la houppe, and by the Italians, from a little owl, which he was accustomed to introduce into his pictures, named »Civetta«, the master with the little owl. He was born about 1480 in Bouvignes, near Namur, died after 1521, probably in Liege. Pupil of Patinir.

145. (681.) The Annunciation. In a hall, gorgeously furnished, kneels Mary before the prayer-desk, while Gabriel, with sceptre and an inscribed scroll, approaches with a greeting. Between the two floats downward the Dove. Upon the reverse: the blood-scourged Christ before the people.

Wood. — 0.74 m h., 0.57 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Cab. 3.

146. (683.) The Adoration of the Magi. In the midst of a varied landscape, sitting under the ruin of a splendid building, the Virgin, with the Child, receives the Adoration of the Magi, whose numerous followers may be seen in the far distance. Upon a column at the left is the little owl. Signed below, on the right: HENRICVS BLESIVS F.

Wood. — 0.74 m h., 0.64 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — (Comp.: Waagen, Handbook p. 155. W. Schmidt, Zahn's Jahrbücher. V. 47.) — Cab. 3.

129. (678.) The Holy Companionship. Upon a recessed throne, Renaissance style with Gothic reminiscences, sits the Virgin with the Child, near the Mother Anna, who holds towards the latter a bunch of grapes. Behind the throne, in the background, stand Joseph and Mary, Joachim and Anna; farther forward Alphaeus with Mary Cleophas and her four sons: Simon and Judas, James Minor and Barnabas; on the other side are Zebedee with Mary Salome and her two sons; James Major and John the Evangelist. Background, landscape and buildings.

Wood. — 0.55 m h., 0.41 m br. — Boiss. Samml. — Lith. by Strixner and Freymann. — Cab. 2.

147. (Schl. 512.) Triptych. Centre-picture: the Adoration of the Magi, in a Renaissance ruin. In the background, the train of followers watering the horses and unloading the camels. Left wing: the Nativity. The Virgin kneels with folded hands before the Child lying upon a stool, above which the ox bends its head. In the middle distance St. Joseph approaches with a light. In the background is seen the Annunciation to the Shepherds, who are assembled around an open fire. Night-piece. Right wing: the Flight into Egypt. An idol, standing upon a rock in the forest, is shattered. School of this master.

Wood. — 0.69 m h., 0.52 m br. — The wing-pieces each 0.21 m br. — Cab. 3.

Lucas van Leyden, born in Leyden 1494, died in that city 1533. Pupil of his father Hugo Jacobsz, afterwards of Cornelis Engelbrechtsen. Was in Antwerp in 1521 and 1522; worked in Leyden.

148. (743.) The Virgin, in an open hall with columns, sits upon a Renaissance chair with the Child upon her lap, who holds in his hands a cluster of grapes with a long trailing vine. Opposite, on the right, sits the Magdalen in rich robes, with the vase of ointment; before her kneels the donor, as St. Joseph, with a branch of lilies, and carpenter's tools. Background: landscape. Kneec-piece. Upon the balustrade in the centre, the date 1522; farther down: L.

Wood. — 0.70 m h., 0.67 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — This panel comprises two adjoining parts of a closing shrine, of which the Annunciation, No. 149, formed the outer side of the cover. In 1604 this work was minutely described by v. Mander as in the possession of Emperor Rudolph II., who had acquired it from Frans Hoogstraet in Leyden. The two parts, originally rounded at the top, are now pieced out. — Cab. 3.

149. (743a.) The Annunciation. The Virgin, kneeling at a prayer desk near her bed with an open book in her hand, receives the message of Gabriel who approaches on the left. Encircling his outstretched sceptre is a scroll inscribed with the Ave Maria. Above him floats a cherub, who holds up a corner of his pluvial.

Wood, gable-formed above. — 0.41 m h., 0.29 m br. — Engr. by H. Walde in E. Förster's Denkmale der deutschen Kunst. Phot. by Hanfstängl. In separating this picture from its reverse (St. Magdalen and the donor) about one third of the panel was destroyed by the saw, this part being restored by Prof. Loeftitz in 1876. — Cab. 3.

Jan Swart van Gröningen, born in Gröningen 1469 (?), died in Autun, perhaps in 1535. Worked, about 1522/23, with Scorel in Gouda. Chiefly influenced by the works of Lucas van Leyden.

150. (744.) John the Baptist, in a landscape with distant view, preaching in the midst of the people, who are seated around him. Upon a stream at the left is a raft.

Wood. — 0.75 m h., 1.11 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Cab. 3.

Jan Mostaert (Mostert), born in Haarlem 1474, died in that city in 1555 or 1556 (according to K. van Mander). Pupil of Jacob Janszen van Haarlem.

151. (646.) The Repose upon the Flight into Egypt. The Virgin sits in a landscape with the Child upon her lap, while St. Joseph, in the middle distance, gathers fruit from a tree, of which a heavily laden branch bends downwards towards him.

Wood, curved above. — 0.84 m h., 0.32 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by Bergmann. — Cab. 3.

152. (639.) The Adoration of the Magi. St. Joseph, on the right, sits near the animals. In the doorway are several of the followers. At the window are two shepherds, and, in the distance on the right, a group of riders in a ravine.

Wood. — 0.45 m h., 0.34 m br. — From the Klausen Cloister in the Tyrol. — Lith. by Strixner. — Cab. 2.

153. (Schl. 293.) The Presentation of Christ in the Temple. The high priest takes the Child from the arms of the Virgin Mother, who stands in the centre. Behind her are the three women who have accompanied her, the one in front carrying two doves in a basket. In the left corner, a dog.

Wood. — 0.48 m h., 0.40 m br. — Mannheim Gallery. — Cab. 2.

Successors of Jan Mostaert.

154. (Schl. 1308.) The Virgin Mary, in a landscape, gives the breast to the Child. In the middle distance, the Massacre of the Innocents; in the background, a town with a harbor.

Wood, curved above. — 0.48 m h., 0.34 m br. — Zweibrücken Gallery. — Cab. 3.

Jan Gossaert (Gossart), called Jan of Mabuse, born at Maubeuge, in Hainault, about 1470, died in Antwerp 1541. (Comp.: Even, Ecole de peinture de Louvain. p. 420.) Studied under the influence of G. David and Q. Massys, and, later, in Italy, under that of Leonardo and Raphael.

155. (707.) The Virgin, in a brown dress with a white veil and red mantle, sitting upon a stone seat in a round arched niche, holds with both hands the Child who stands with one foot upon the right thigh of the mother. Around the arch is the following inscription in relief: GE. 3. MVLIERIS SEMEN IHS. SERPENTIS CAPVT CONTRIVIT. Signed upon the step below: IOANNES MALBODIVS PINGEBAT. 1527.

Wood. — 0.30 m h., 0.24 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. A repetition by the hand of the master is in the Belvedere in Vienna. — Cab. 3.

156. (633.) Jupiter descends in a golden shower to Danae, who sits in an open bay with columns. Renaissance style. Half life-size. Signed upon the step below: IOANNES. MALBODIVS. PINGEBAT. 1527.

Wood. 1.13 m h., 0.95 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Cab. 3.

Bernaert (Barend) van Orley, born in Brussels, probably in 1491 or 1492, died in that city Jan. 6th, 1542. Probably a pupil of his father Valentyn, afterwards, in Italy, imitated Raphael and Leonardo. After 1515 lived in Brussels. From 1520 to 1527 Court-Painter of the Stadtholder Margaret of Austria; after 1532 held the same position under Queen Maria of Hungary.

157. (651.) St. Norbert, monk of Premontre, before numerous auditors of both sexes, in a richly ornamented Renaissance hall, refutes from the pulpit the heretic Tanchellinus. The Saint is again seen, through an arched door in the background, stretched upon the turf under a fig-tree, reading in a book. Near him are two men conversing, and in the air an angel with an inscribed scroll.

Wood. — 0.94 m h., 0.75 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by Strixner. — Hall II.

158. (99.) The Archangel Michael, with the banner of victory in his hand, stands behind the donor, who, on the left and turning towards the left, kneels at his feet. In the left background, a grotesque castle on a cliff. Right wing of an otherwise unknown altar-piece.

Wood, curved above. — 1.46 m h., 0.84 m br. — Bois. Coll. — Hall II.

159. (652) The Adoration of the Magi. The Virgin sits in a Renaissance ruin with the Child, who is adored by the Three Wise Men. In the background are two of the followers and two lookers on.

Wood. — 0.98 m h., 0.80 m br. — Bois. Coll. — Lith. by Bergmann. — Dutch painting after the manner of Orley. — Cab. 3.

Dutch, about 1530.

160. (10.) St. Christopher, surrounded by goblins, holding a pike in his right hand and a duck upon a staff, bears the Child upon his shoulders through a stream. In the middle distance the Saint is again seen, occupied in fishing, and upon the opposite side the Child calling to him; on the right the hermit with the lantern.

Wood. — 1.31 m h., 1.80 m br. — Electrolal Gallery of Munich. — Hall II.

161. (Schl. 1412.) The Nativity. On the left the Virgin kneels before the Child lying upon a foot-stool; on the right kneel four angels; a dozen others float above in adoration. In the left corner stands St. Joseph with a burning candle. Two shepherds look through the window. Night-piece, with light emanating from the Child. Upon the reverse a coat-of-arms. A repetition of this picture is in the Belvedere in Vienna.

Wood. — 0.61 m h., 0.45 m br. — From the Castle Neuburg on the Danube. — Cab. 2.

162. (Schl. 1360.) The Offerings of the Magi. On the right sits the Virgin in a splendid Renaissance hall, under a red canopy. One king kneels before her on the left, a second stands in the middle. Centre-piece of the two following wings.

Wood, curved above. 1.05 m h., 1.67 m br. — From the Cloister Benedictbeuern. Is to be classed with the School of Utrecht, in the Archiepiscopal Museum of which town a repetition of this picture is preserved. — Hall II.

163. (Schl. 1361.) The Third King, the African, with sceptre and vessel of gold. Behind him followers. Knee-piece, towards the right. Left wing of the preceding.

Wood, curved above. — 1.05 m h., 0.30 m br. — Derivation as above. — Hall II.

164. (Schl. 1362.) St. Joseph pressing his hat upon his breast with the right hand, the left supported upon a staff. Knee-piece, towards the left. Right wing of the two preceding.

165. (1165.) Lucrece, in a transparent garment and a rich Dutch cap, about to thrust a sword into her breast with both hands. In the background, a castle upon a cliff. Half figure.

Wood. — 0.42 m h., 0.34 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Acquired by the Elector Charles Theodore. — The style of this work resembles that of Jacob Cornelisz. — Cab. 2.

Dutch, about 1540.

166. (1195.) Portrait of a merchant with black cap and vest and robe of red damask trimmed with fur; holding in his hand a pink. Breast-piece, towards the right.

Wood. — 0.34 m h., 0.24 m br. — Zweibrücken Gallery. — Formerly attributed to Garofalo. — Cab. 2.

167. (690.) The Vision of Ezekiel. Christ upon the clouds, borne aloft by the four Evangelists.

Wood. — 0.91 m h., 0.68 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Lith. by J. Piloty. — Free copy after a composition by Raphael. (Engr. by Enea Vico 1548. Bartsch Nr. 8.) — Cab. 2.

168. (1178.) The Deposition. The body of Christ rests upon the lap of Joseph of Arimathea. The Virgin is sustained by a woman and St. John. The Magdalen has cast herself down with her face upon the body. Behind her, near Nicodemus, kneels one of the holy women.

Wood. — 0.33 m h., 0.23 m br. — Zweibrücken Gallery. — Lith. by Strixner. — Free copy after a composition by Raphael, the original drawing for which is now in Gotha. (Comp. Crowe & Cavalcaselle, Vol. II, pp. 465, 466.) — Cab. 3.

Jan van Hemessen (Hemsen), born about 1500, probably in the village Hemixem near Antwerp; died before 1566. After 1519 pupil of Hendrik van Cleve. Became master before 1524, worked in Antwerp.

169. (74.) St. Matthew called by the Saviour to be an apostle. Christ appears in the door-way on the right; St. Matthew on the left, with two other men, sits before a table covered with coins; opposite to him a girl is weighing gold-pieces. In the background stands an aged couple with gestures of lamentation. Upon a cartouche above is the following: SEGVERE ME MATTHÆI CAP. IX. Signed upon a roll below: 1536 IOHANNES DE HEMESSEN PINXIT.

Wood. — 1.15 m h., 1.55 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich — Hall II.

Wood. — 1.18 m h., 1.50 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Companion-piece to the preceding. — Hall II.

171. (692.) The Holy Family. The Virgin sits in a landscape with the Child, who speaks with St. John kneeling before Him. St. Elizabeth and St. Joseph, a straw hat hanging from his shoulder, are looking on. Signed below on the left, upon a stone: IOHANNES | DE HEMES | SEM. P. | 1541.

Wood. — 0.47 m h., 0.35 m br. — From the Castle of Neuburg on the Danube. — Cab. 3.

Vincenz Sellaer,

Flemish painter of the first half of the sixteenth century; known only by the following picture.

172. (Schl. 776.) Suffer Little Children to come unto Me. Christ amidst mothers and children, sitting upon a carved chair, holds upon his lap a little naked boy, standing, and turns towards another, who, drawing near offers him a pear. Signed, upon the front leg of the chair: VINCENT SELLAER 1538.

Wood. — 1.00 m h., 1.27 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Hall II.

UPPER GERMAN SCHOOLS.

Hall III. — Cabinets IV and V.

Martin Schongauer,

called Martin Schön or Hipsch Martin (Bel Martino), engraver and painter, son of the Augsburg goldsmith Casper Schongauer who became a citizen of Kolmar in 1445. The painter was born about 1450, died at Breisach, perhaps February 2, at all events before June 9, 1488. (Comp. D. Burckhardt, Die Schule M. Schongauer's, Basel, 1888.) Influenced by Rogier van der Weyden; worked chiefly in Kolmar.

174. (1360.) The Nativity. The Virgin, in a bright red robe and mantle, sits before the manger upon a grassy bank, and offers a flower to the Child resting upon her lap. In the middle distance a ruined shed with the two animals and St. Joseph. On the left, view of a hilly landscape.

Wood. — 0.26 m h., 0.17 m br. — Mannheim Gallery. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Cab. 4.

Bartholomew Zeitblom,

mentioned in the archives of Ulm from 1484 to 1518
Worked in Ulm.

175. St. Margaret standing, towards the right, with a white cloth over her head and a red mantle over a robe of dark green. She presses the mantle about her with her left hand and raises the right as if commanding the dragon which encircles her feet. Full figure, under life-size.

Wood, gold-ground. — 1.34 m h., 0.41 m br. — Delivered by Count Rechberg in 1816 to the Wallerstein Collection; until 1882 in the Chapel of St. Maurice in Nuremberg. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall III.

176. St. Ursula standing toward the left, wearing a crown upon her blonde head and a green mantle over a red dress.

She holds in her hands an open book and an arrow. Full-figure, under life-size.

Wood, gold-ground. — Same size and origin as the preceding picture, to which it is the companion-piece. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall III.

177. (1357.) St. Bridget, in a gray robe, with a white head and chin-cloth, standing before a gold-embroidered tapestry. Above, Gothic ornamentations upon a dark blue ground.

Wood. — 1.37 m h., 0.45 m br. — Came into the Wallerstein Collection in 1816, through Count Rechberg. — Cab. 4.

Upper Suabian, about 1490.

178. (1374.) Bishop Cyprian, in episcopal robes, pointing with the right hand to an open book. Full-figure, standing towards the left.

Wood, patterned gold-ground. — 1.21 m h., 0.42 m br. — Upon the suppression of the Bavarian convents in 1803, this picture came into the possession of the State from the Wengen Cloister in Ulm; with the two wing-pieces in the gallery at Augsburg (Nos. 63 and 64) it had belonged to one altar-piece. The whereabouts of the centre, which was perhaps a carving, is unknown. From a picture in the Frauenkirche in Munich R. Vischer suggests for the artist of the wing-pieces the name »Master of St. Quirinus«. It may be remarked that No. 63 in Augsburg bears the date 1504. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Cab. 4.

179. (1373.) Pope Cornelius holding the triple cross and reading in a book. Full-figure, standing to the right.

Wood, patterned gold-ground. — 1.21 m h., 0.42 m br. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Companion-piece to the former, and of like derivation.

180. (714.) St. George in silver armor, standing before a red tapestry with a white banner in his hand.

Wood. — 0.70 m h., 0.49 m br. — Came from the Swabian Cloister Gmünd, in 1803, into the Wallerstein Collection, and from this into the possession of the King. — Cab. 5.

181. (718.) St. Anthony before a gold tapestry, leaning upon a silver staff, with a golden crook (cross of St. Anthony). Near by is the swine with the bell.

Wood. — 0.70 m h., 0.49 m br. — Companion-piece to the former and of like derivation. — Cab. 5.

182. (1283.) Christ as Judge of the World, in a colored mandorla, sitting upon a rainbow; at his feet the globe. On the sides the Virgin Mary and St. John the Baptist. Wood. — 1.78 m h., 0.81 m br. — Hall III.

209. (17.) The Martyrdom of St. Sebastian. The saint, bound to a figtree, is shot with arrows in the presence of the judge and several witnesses. In the foreground is a man, clad in the Bavarian colors, who, kneeling, spans his cross-bow. In the background, a city. Centre-piece to Nos. 210 and 211.

Wood. — 1.53 m h., 1.06 m br. — Bought for the State in 1809 from the Church of St. Salvator in Augsburg. — Engr. by H. Walde (E. Förster's Denkmale der deutschen Kunst.) — Phot. by Hanfstängl and Albert. — Painted in the year 1515. — This picture differs so essentially and undeniably from most of the known paintings of Holbein the Elder, that former investigators have looked upon it as an early work of his son. It may well be that the younger Holbein worked with his father in the years from 1512 to 1515, and it would not be necessary to suppose so great a change of style in the elder master as this picture would indicate, if the assistance of his son, a younger and abler artist, were assured. There is no doubt that the work was ordered from the father and that the design was chiefly his; it is also possible that the son may have left Augsburg before the completion of the picture, as he went to Basel in August 1515. But the agreement of the style, especially of the wing-pieces, with the earlier works of the younger Holbein in Basel lead to the belief that very considerable share in this must be attributed to the son, the quality of whose art was far above the taste in composition and the ability of his father. In the Royal Museum at Copenhagen are five small studies in detail for the centre picture, which, perhaps, still betray the hand of the elder Holbein; the Duc d'Aumale however in his collection at Chantilly near Paris has the study for the head reverently looking upwards, in the St. Elizabeth picture, which bears the inscription Hanns Holbein maler Der alt 1515. — If, as seems probable, this inscription is contemporary with the drawing it would prove that even at that time the younger Holbein had as an artist distinguished himself from the elder. Contrary to the usual opinion, we hold this drawing to be a work of the younger Holbein, and upon the following grounds: in an artists portrait of himself the position of the head here given would imply the complicated use of several mirrors, a finesse foreign to the entire period, as well as to the nature of the elder Holbein. If he had wished to introduce his portrait into the picture in this attitude the only reasonable supposition is that he would have been drawn in it by one of his assistants, the best of whom, provided that he had several at this time, was his son Hans, whose own feeling would naturally have led him to add to the portrait of his father »Der Alte«. Our opinion is supported by the comparison of this drawing with the earlier works of the younger Holbein in Basel, especially by the portrait drawing of the Burgomaster Meyer, 1516. — Hall III.

210. (16.) St. Barbara. Full figure, towards the right, in her hand the chalice with the Host floating above it. Within a Renaissance frame. Upon the reverse: the Angel of the Annunciation, in Renaissance architecture. Light gray in gray. Left wing-piece of No. 209.

Wood. — 1.53 m h., 0.45 m br. — Lith. by Flachenecker. Engr. by Spiess, A. Volckert and H. Walde (E. Förster's Denkmale deutscher Kunst.) Phot. by Albert and Hanfstängl. — Hall III.

211. (18.) St. Elizabeth of Thuringia between a boy and an old man, both diseased, for the latter of whom she is filling a vessel from a jug. Behind the old man is the portrait of the elder Holbein. In the background, the Wartburg, which appears again in the centre picture. Upon the reverse: The Virgin of the Annunciation, with Renaissance background and frame. Light gray in gray. Second wing-piece of No. 209.

Wood. — 1.53 m h., 0.45 m br. — Lith. by Strixner and (as a breast-piece) by J. Piloty. Engr. by Spiess, A. Volckert and H. Walde. Phot. by J. Albert and Hanfstängl. — Hall III.

Hans Holbein the Younger, born in Augsburg 1497, died in London between Oct. 7th, and Nov. 29th, 1543. Pupil of his father, Hans H. the elder. After the autumn of 1515 lived in Basel where, in July 1520, he received the rights of citizenship. After 1526, with some interruptions, in England.

212. (758a.) Portrait of Derich Born, a young merchant of the Hansic Stahlfhof in London; dressed in black with an embroidered shirt-collar. Near the head and separated by it, is the following mutilated inscription:

DE BOR(N)

(Ae) TATIS SVAE . . .

(A^o) MD XXX (III)

Oval. — On Paper. — 0.09 m h., 0.08 m br. — Mannheim Gallery. — The portrait of Derich Born in Windsor Castle bears the date 1533. — Cab. 4.

from Job, X—20: »Nunquid non paucitas dierum finietur brevi?« Under a fold: IO HOLPAIN.

Wood. — 0.48 m h., 0.38 m br. — As early as the 16th century in the Ducal Gallery in Munich. — Etched by F. L. Raab. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — A second example of this portrait from the Methuen Collection (since 1848 in possession of the Duke of Westminster) bears, beside the quotation from Job, the following inscription: »Brianus Tuke Miles. Anno Aetatis suae LVII«, and the motto: »Droit et avant«. — Cab. 5.

Martin Schaffner, worked in Ulm between 1508 and 1535, died in that city about 1541. Probably a pupil of Schüleins; afterwards influenced by the paintings of the Venetians. Worked in Ulm.

214. (7.) The Annunciation. Between the columns of a Renaissance hall the angel approaches the Virgin, who is kneeling before her prayer-desk, while the Dove floats downwards upon a ray of light, emanating from God the Father. In the background, on the right, an angel is occupied in arranging the bed of the Virgin. On the left, view of a landscape, with the Visitation. Inscribed upon the head of the bed is the date 1523. The gold-patterned tapestry has been restored. Upon the reverse: Mary, with four other holy women; part of a Departure of the Saviour, the other half of which is represented upon the back of No. 217.

Wood, curved above. — 3.00 m h., 1.58 m br. — This and the following paintings formed originally the wings of the altar door in the Prelacy of Weddenhausen, near Ulm, and came, at the time of the breaking up of the Convent, into the possession of the Bavarian Government in the year 1803. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall III.

215. (21.) The Presentation of the Child in the Temple. Simeon, whose brocade garment has been repainted, holds the Child in his arms. On the left kneels the Virgin, behind her stand St. Joseph and two women. On the right is the Mother Anna, with pocket and bunch of keys at her girdle. Levites surround the altar table with the Ark of the Covenant. Dated upon the choir of the Temple, occupied by three lookers on: 1524.

Size and derivation like the preceding. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall III.

216. (25.) The Descent of the Holy Ghost. In a splendid Renaissance hall, which opens upon a busy square, sits the Virgin, surrounded by the Apostles. Over them floats the Dove. Inscribed in the tympanon of the door, on the right side, is the monogram of the artist:

Size and derivation like the preceding. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall III.

217. (36.) The Death of the Virgin. She kneels between the Apostles. One of these, in priestly garments, holds before her a book, while two others support her. Upon the right, two, kneeling, are reading from a book, two others are visible in the background. Upon the right two Apostles are bringing a sprinkle and a censer. Above the group floats the soul of the dying, borne by angels upwards to a glory, where she is received by Christ. Signed upon the right, over a window, with the monogram. Upon the reverse: Christ with the Apostles, the other half of the Departure of Christ. See No. 214.

Size and derivation like No. 214. — Engr. by J. Burger, (E. Förster's Denkmale der deutschen Kunst). — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall III.

Sum wolfgang' ego Comes ex öting bene natus,
 Quinquaginta duos phebus mihi sustulit annos,
 Me, quum Solis equi petierunt Cornua Tauri, Martinus Schaffner mira depinxerat arte 1508.

Wood. — 0.45 m h., 0.29 m br. — From the private possession of the Oettingen-Wallerstein family in Deggingen. — Cab. 4.

219. (750.) See between 100 and 101.

Hans Burgkmair,

born in Augsburg 1473 died in that city in 1531. Pupil of his father, Thomas Burgkmair, and of Schongauer in Colmar. Was living in Strassburg as late as 1490. Received into the Guild of painters in Augsburg in 1498, influenced by study of the works of Albert Dürer and the Venetian painters.

220. (738.) Portrait of the painter Martin Schongauer. Beneath the brown coat lined with fur is seen the collar of a black undergarment. The head is covered with a black cap the bands of which (?) fall over the breast in front. Breast-piece to the left. Upon the left above: HIPSCH MARTIN

SCHONGAUER MALER 1483. In addition, an escutcheon with a red crescent upon a white ground.

Wood. — 0.30 m h., 0.22 m br. — Upon the back is a paper, partially injured, bearing the inscription: Mayster Martin schongawer Maler genent Hipsch, Martin von wegen seiner Kunst geboren zu Kolmar Abe(r) von seinen Ölttern ain, augspurger bur(ger) Des geschlechtz vo Her (?) geporn (?) & ist (gest)orben zu kolma(r) anno 1499 . . . (den 2te(n) . . . Hornungs Dem got genad . . . ch (?) sein (?) junge(r) Hans burgkmair jm jar 1488. — (Master Martin Schongauer, called because of his art, Hipsch Martin, born at Colmar, but by parentage a citizen of Augsburg, of the family von Her (?) Died at Colmar in the year 1499 on the 2. of Feb. May God give him grace! I, Hans Burgkmair, his pupil, in the year 1488.) As Dürer, in 1492, found Schongauer no longer in the land of the living, the above notice in regard to the year of his death cannot be true. The error is easily explained by the circumstance that our picture, which seems once to have been in the possession of Dürer, is a copy of an original work of 1483, and cannot well have been painted before 1510, as is evident from certain technical peculiarities. The youthful appearance of the figure is somewhat surprising in view of the extent of Schongauer's previous work as an engraver, but this excessively productive artist did not attain to a great age, and was referred to by Dürer in a note upon the edge of one of Schongauer's drawings, dated 1470, as then »still a young apprentice.« (Compare: His Heusler in Naumanns Archiv 1867, p. 129 etc. and D. Burckhardt: Die Schule M. Schongauer's am Oberrhein, Basel, 1888.) Came from the Praun Cabinet, (Comp.: Murr, Description du Cabinet de M. P. de Praun, 1797) into the collection of Count Fries in Vienna, from whom it was bought by the Bavarian Government for 97 florins. Engr. by A. Petrak, A. Bartsch and C. Goutzwiller. Phot. by Hanfstängl. An early copy of this picture is in the Gallery of Sienna. — Cab. 5.

221. (619.) St. Liborius and St. Eustace. Full figures, standing, toward the right. At the feet of the former a man stricken with the plague. Above, Gothic tracery upon gold-ground. Upon the reverse: in a niche of red marble, St. Roch standing toward the right; an angel dresses a wound in his foot.

Wood, gold-ground. — 1.15 m h., 0.56 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Cab. 5.

222. (65.) St. John the Evangelist at Patmos, sitting under three palms, in the midst of rich vegetation, is about to write the Apocalypse. He looks upward to the Queen of Heaven, who appears to him in the clouds. The Saint is surrounded by various animals. Signed upon a roll among his papers: IOHANN BVRGKMAIR PINGEBAT MDXVIII.

Wood. — 1.50 m h., 1.25 m br. — From the Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Hall III.

No. 223 (728) and 224 (742.) See between 296 and 297

225. (73.) Queen Esther in a splendid Renaissance hall kneels before the throne of her husband, Ahasuerus, asking for mercy towards the Israelites. On the left side of the throne stands Haman near a bridled panther. On the right, view in the city, with Mordecai and his train. Haman, with others, upon the gallows. Signed upon a pier in the centre. MDXXVIII. JOANN BVRGKMAIR PICTOR AVGUSTANS FACIEBAT.

Wood. — 1.16 m h., 1.55 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — From the inscription and from the reminiscences of Venetian art and places, it is evident that this picture was painted in Venice. — Hall III.

226. (722.) St. John the Baptist. Full figure, to the right, standing before a pier. Dated on the left above: 1518.

Wood. — 1.45 m h., 0.45 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Cab. 5.

227. (723.) St. John the Evangelist. Full figure to the left. Companion-piece to No. 226.

Jörg Breu (Brew, Prew) the Elder;

perhaps the son of »Georg Prew von Aue«, as he calls himself upon a picture, dated 1501, now at Herzogenburg in Austria, (Comp.: Nagler, Mgr. I. p. 707); worked from about 1512 in Augsburg, died in that city in 1536. (Comp. Nagler, work quoted above; — also A. Rosenberg, Lützow, L. f. b. K. Vol. X p. 389.)

228. (26.) The Victory of Scipio Africanus over Hannibal's Army at Zama. On the right the Romans; in the foreground the spectators turned toward the combat. Scipio Africanus mounted, is recognizable by the inscription upon the horse; in the middle-ground, above, at the left, Hannibal with a red standard bearing his name. In the background, the two encampments opposite each other; on the right, designated by name, the city Nadagra; more distant, a seaport. Signed, upon a stone slab, below, on the right: JORG PREW. Under this, upon a rock, the monogram of the artist: Upon a small cippus, the coat-of-arms of the Bavarian Duchy with the letters HW which designate Duke William IV, at whose order this picture was painted, together with the similar battle-pieces of Feselen and Altdorfer.

Wood. — 1.60 m h., 1.20 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Cab. 5.

Michael Wolgemut,

born in Nuremberg 1434, died in that city Nov. 30, 1519. Studied under Flemish influence; worked in Nuremberg.

229. (39.) The Resurrection. Christ, in the act of blessing, stands upon the step of the sarcophagus in the foreground. One of the three watchers is waking. Through the door of the walled churchyard come the three Holy Women. In the background, Jerusalem in the light of dawn. Upon the reverse: St. Bartholomew and St. James standing before a tapestry. Upon the blue ground above: nach cristi geburt. MCCCCLXV iar ist dis werck gesatzet worden. (This work was executed in the year 1465 after the birth of Christ.)

Wood. — 1.74 m h., 1.11 m br. — This, with the three following panels, belonged to an altar which, until 1810 was in the Church of the Trinity at Hof in Upper Franconia. — Hall III.

230. (22.) Christ upon the Mount of Olives. Through the gate of the garden in the background approaches the betrayer with his followers. Upon the reverse: on a dark ground, the archangel Michael slaying the dragon with the sword.

Wood. — 1.74 m h., 1.11 m br. — Derivation like the preceding. — Hall III.

231. (27.) The Crucifixion of Christ. The Virgin and St. John, with four women, and the Centurion with the sacred spear. On the right, Jews, the Captain and soldiers. Upon the reverse: the Annunciation, upon gold-ground.

Wood. 1.74 m h., 1.11 m br. — Derivation like No. 229. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall III.

232. (34.) The Descent from the Cross, in the presence of the Virgin, four holy women and St. John. Upon the reverse: The Nativity, upon gold-ground.

Wood. — 1.74 m h., 1.11 m br. — Derivation like No. 229. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall III.

233. (1423.) The Crucifixion; on the left the Virgin supported by St. John and one of the holy women, with the other women, the Centurion and two soldiers; on the right, one with the sponge, judges, officers and soldiers, mounted and on foot; the Magdalen clasps the foot of the cross. Background: landscape with Jerusalem.

Wood, gold-ground. — 1.90 m h., 1.81 m br. — Brought from the Castle of Nuremberg to Bamberg in 1810 and to the Pinakothek in 1812. — Attribution uncertain. — Hall III.

234. (82.) The Mystic Marriage of St. Catharine with the Child, who sits upon the lap of his mother. Through the window of the room is a view towards Nazareth. Upon the reverse the Nativity; the donor with the coat-of-arms of the Landauer family of Nuremberg.

Wood. — 1.80 m h., 1.11 m br. — Wing of a triptych, of which the representations of the Resurrection and Crucifixion, Nos. 42 and 43 in the Gallery at Augsburg, formed the second wing. Formerly in the Castle of Nuremberg, came, by exchange, into the Royal Collection in 1810. — Hall III.

235. (1415.) The Twelve Apostles go forth to preach the gospel to all the world. In the halo of each is designated his name and the land of his mission. In a mountainous landscape, with many trees and traversed by a river, are seen, in the left foreground, St. Peter (Italia), drinking from a flask, and St. Thomas, (India), with a cap in his hand; behind are St. Bartholomew, (Cilicia), and St. Andrew (Achaia), stretching out their hands in leave-taking. On the right, St. John, (Asia), with a jug drawing water, and St. James Minor, (Judea), walking towards the border; in the middle distance near the tree, St. James Major, (Hispania), and Philip, (Frigia), embracing, while, wandering in the distance, is St. Matthew, (Aethiopea), near a hillock, and still farther, by a rocky shore, St. Simon (Persia), Thaddeus, (Mesopotamia), and Matthias, (Palestina) are climbing the rocky paths of the background.

Wood. — 1.46 m h., 1.53 m br. — From the Castle of Nuremberg. — Hall III.

born in Nuremberg May 21st, 1471, died in that city April 6th, 1528. Pupil of his father as a goldsmith, and, from 1486 to 1490, of Mich. Wolgemut as a painter. Travelled for four years in Germany and Italy, after that lived in Nuremberg, was again, from 1505 to 7, in Italy, and in the Netherlands from 1521 to 22.

236. (712.) Portrait of one Oswolt Krel. Before a red tapestry, which opens on the left the view of a group of trees, the figure looks out of the picture. Face, three quarters profile, to the left. The left hand grasps the fur coat, which is thrown over the shoulder; the right rests upon a parapet. Inscribed on the right above with the name of the person represented and 1499.

Wood. — 0.48 m h., 0.38 m br. — Came into the Wallerstein Coll. in 1812 from Hertel, art dealer in Liesheim. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — (Comp.: Thausing, Dürer, p. 46.) — Cab. 5.

Wood. — 0.29 m h., 0.26 m br. — From the Praun Cabinet. Bought by the Crown Prince Ludwig, in 1809, from Frauenholz in Nuremberg, together with the portrait of Wolgemut for 340 ducats. — Lith. by Strixner. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — (Comp.: Thausing, Dürer, p. 37.) — Cab. 4.

238. (94.) The Deposition. The Virgin Mary, St. John and Nicodemus, with the holy women, in all eight persons, surround the body of Christ, which, taken from the cross, lies upon a linen cloth on the ground, upheld under the arms by Joseph of Arimathea. In the background, view of Jerusalem, in a mountainous district, with a storm coming on. In the left middle-distance a rock-tomb. Signed upon the linen cloth with the monogram and 1500. In various parts of the foreground appear as pentimenti the votive portraits of the donors.

Wood. — 1.51 m h., 1.21 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Lith. by Strixner and Bergmann. Phot. by Hanfstängl. (Comp.: Thausing. Dürer p. 134.) — Hall III.

239. (716.) Portrait of the artist by himself. In a fur coat, the blonde curling hair falling upon the shoulders, the right hand upon the breast. Breast-piece, life-size, full-face. On the left of the head the monogram with the date 1500; on the right the inscription: »Albertus Durerus Noricus ipsum me propriis sic effingebam coloribus aetatis anno XXVIII.

Wood. — 0.65 m h., 0.48 m. br. — Lith. by N. Strixner in »A Dürer's christlich-mythologischen Randzeichnungen, München 1808«, by C. G. Enslen 1818, by J. Rehberg in his »Raphael«, and by J. Wölffle. Engr. by Fr. Wagner, F. Förster and Fleischmann. Etched by J. L. Raab. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — This portrait was preserved, probably from the year of Dürer's death, certainly from 1575, (according to van Mander) until the end of the last century in the possession of the Magistrates of Nuremberg. It was afterwards sawed through, evidently with intent to deceive. A copy which was painted upon the back remained in Nuremberg, and is now in the Germanic Museum, while the front part, with the original, after passing through various hands, was bought in 1805 from the Consul G. G. Pez for the sum of 600 guildens, and placed in the Electoral Gallery. — Cab. 4.

240. (2.) The Nativity. The Virgin and St. Joseph kneel in a ruin, adoring the Child, who lies between them, surrounded by five angels. From the left approach two shepherds, and two from the middle-distance. Upon a post supporting the roof, in front, is the monogram. Centre-piece of the two following wings, together known as Baumgartner's Altar.

Wood. — 1.52 m h., 1.23 m br. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — From the Church of St. Catharine in Nuremberg; presented by the Magistracy of that city to Elector Maximilian I in 1613. A pen drawing of this picture, in the British Museum, is only a copy. (Comp. Thausing, Dürer, p. 136.) — Hall III.

241. (1.) The Nuremberg patrician Stephen Baumgartner, as knight in armor, in red trappings, with spear and shield; standing near his horse, turned to the right.

Wood. — 1.53 m h., 0.87 m br. — Lith. by W. Flachenecker. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Formed, with No. 242, the wings of the preceding — Hall III.

242. (3.) The Nuremberg patrician Lucas Baumgartner, in an iron coat-of-mail, with red trappings; in the right hand a lance, the left resting upon the hilt of his sword; standing before his horse. The backgrounds of these wing-pieces are a later addition, — probably by the hand of the Court Painter T. G. Fischer, of Munich.

Wood. — 1.53 m h., 0.87 m br. — Lith. by W. Flachenecker. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall III.

243. (731.) Portrait of Michael Wolgemut, three-quarters face, to the right. The head of the aged master is bound with a black silk cloth. A fur collar, a black underdress and the edge of the shirt are visible. On the left above, upon a green ground, is the inscription: Das hat albrecht durer abconterfet noch seine Lermeister michel wolgemut im jor 1516 vnd er was 82 jor vnd hat gelebt pis das man zelet 1519 jor do ist er ferschieden an sant endres dag frv ee dy sun awff gyng. »This has Albert Dürer portrayed after his master Michael Wolgemut, in the year 1516. He was (then) eighty-two years old, and lived until the year 1519, when he died on Saint Andrew's day, (Nov. 30th), early before the sun rose.« Below, the monogram with the date 1516. It is evident that the second part of the inscription was written later, perhaps in 1519, the year of Wolgemut's death. The drawing from which Dürer painted the picture is in the Albertina in Vienna.

Wood. — 0.29 m h., 0.27 m br. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. This painting was formerly in the Praun Cabinet in Nuremberg, at the sale of which it passed to Frauenholz, and from him, in 1809, to Ludwig I. then Crownprince of Bavaria. — Cab. 4.

244. (93.) The Death of Lucrece. At the foot of her bed, which is draped with green curtains, she stands, turned towards the left, naked except a strip around the hips, about to thrust a dagger into the right breast. Full figure, life-size. Signed below on the left with the monogram and 1518.

Wood. — 1.66 m h., 0.74 m br. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — As early as the end of the sixteenth century this picture was in the Ducal Treasure Chamber, and it hence can hardly be identified with the work seen by van Mander in Middelburg. (Compare his Schilderboeck, 1618, p. 132.) — Hall III.

245. (715.) St. Joachim and St. Joseph, full figures, half life-size. The latter wears a green, the former a gold brocade garment over a red under-dress. Upon the staff of St. Joseph the (spurious) monogram and the date 1523.

Wood, gold-ground; curved above. — 0.93 m h., 0.52 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by J. Strixner. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Formed with No. 246 the inner wings of an altar in the private chapel of the Jabach family in Cologne. The outer pictures, saved from their backs, represent upon the one side the Trials of Job, upon the other two of Job's Comforters; they are now in the City Museum of Cologne. The whereabouts of the centre-piece is unknown. (Comp.: Thausing, Dürer p. 138.) — Cab. 4.

246. (719.) St. Simeon and St. Lazarus. The former, in a red cloth cap and red garment lined with fur, stretches out his hands in prayer. The latter, in a rich pluvial, with mitre, crozier and book. Upon the staff the (spurious) monogram. Companion-piece to the former.

Wood, gold-ground; curved above. — 0.93 m h., 0.52 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Lith. by Strixner. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Cab. 4.

247. (71.) St. John the Evangelist, turned towards the right, stands reading in a book, which he holds in both hands. St. Peter looks over his left shoulder into the open book. St. John wears, over a green under-dress a red mantle lined with yellow. St. Peter, designated by a golden key, is wrapped in a gray garment. Full figures, over life-size. Signed with the monogram and the date 1526.

Wood. — 2.04 m h., 0.74 m br. — Lith. by F. Piloty. — Engr. by A. Reindel. Etched by M. Kellerhoven and by J. L. Raab. Phototype by J. Albert, Phot. by Hanfstängl. — This panel and its companion-piece, No. 248, known as the Four Apostles, or the Four Temperaments, were presented by the artist, on Oct. 7th, 1526, to the Council of his native city, where they were placed in an upper room of the Town Hall. In the year 1627 they were given up to the Elector Maximilian I. of Bavaria, and replaced with copies by G. Gaertner. The lower parts of the originals with the following characteristic texts: Peter: Ep. II, ch. 2; John: Ep. I, ch. 4; Paul: Tim. Ep. II, ch. 3, and Mark: ch. 2. were joined to the copies, and are now in the Germanic Museum in Nuremberg (Nos. 265 and 266). — Hall III.

Wood. — 2.04 m h., 0.74 m br. — Derivation and reproductions like the preceding. — Hall III.

249. (51.) Portrait of Jacob Fugger the Rich, face three-quarters to the left, wearing a fur coat over a black undergarment, the hair in a brocade cap. The green ground is modern.

Canvas, in water-color. — 0.68 m h., 0.52 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — The best of the repetitions of this picture, signed with the date 1520, is in the possession of Count Törring in Munich. The original drawing is owned by Thausing in Vienna. — Cab. 4.

250. (745.) The Mater Dolorosa, with eyes uplifted, stands in a stone niche, the hands crossed upon the breast; in a blue garment, with a white cloth over the head and

School of Albert Dürer.

251. (649.) The Holy Family. The Virgin, sitting near her mother Anna, holds towards her the Child. At the back, St. Joseph and St. Joachim. Background, landscape.

Wood. — 0.77 m h., 0.58 m br. — Wrongly inscribed Jan de Mabuse. — Cab. 5.

Copies after Albert Dürer.

252. (720.) Portrait of the father of Albert Dürer, in a black cap, black under-dress, and brownish-yellow coat with wide sleeves. With the inscription: »1497. Das malt Ich nach meines vatters gestalt, Da Er war sibenzich Jar alt. Albrecht Dürer Der elter.« (»1497. This I painted from my father's form, when he was seventy years old. Albert Dürer the Elder.« Under this the monogram.

Wood. — 0.51 m h., 0.40 m br. — Lith. by M. Strixner. — Came from the Rechberg Collection into the Wallerstein Gallery, and from this into the possession of the King. The original, probably the same relinquished by the Council of Nuremberg to Charles I of England, is owned by the Duke of Northumberland in Zion House near London. Another copy is in the Städel Museum at Frankfurt on the Main. — Cab. 4.

253. (1348.) The Martyrdom of the Ten Thousand Christians under the Persian King Sapor II. In the middle of the picture are Dürer and Wilibald Pirkheimer. Background, a fantastic rocky landscape.

Wood. — 1.00 m h., 0.89 m br. — Düsseldorf Gallery. — The original is in the Belvedere in Vienna, the original drawing in the Albertina. — Dürer painted the picture for Duke Frederick III. of Saxony; it was afterwards in the collection of Rudolph II. The small banner which Dürer holds bears in the original the inscription: »Iste faciebat anno domini 1508 Albertus Dürer Alemanus.« — Cab. 4.

Hans von Kulmbach, real name Hans Süss, born at Kulmbach in Franconia, died in Nuremberg between Sept. 29 and Dec. 3, 1522. Pupil of Jacob Walch and, probably, also of Albert Dürer. Worked in Nuremberg.

254. (40.) Saint Joseph, in a gray undergarment and red mantle; in the hands a staff and laurel branch. Full figure, to the right. See Nr. 255.

Wood, gold-ground. — 1.54 m h., 0.53 m br. — Sent from Nuremberg in 1812. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall III.

255. (46.) St. Zacharias, in a red under-dress, blue mantle and violet head drapery in the act of speaking. Full figure, to the left. Companion-piece to the preceding, and of like derivation.

Wood, gold-ground. — 1.54 m h., 0.53 m br. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall III.

256. Joachim and Anna. The former in priestly robes, with a yellow head-dress, holds in his hands the censor. The latter in a green mantle over a red dress with a white head-cloth, the wrists crossed. Figures less than life-size, standing to the right. See No. 257.

Wood, gold-ground. — 1.42 m h., 1.58 m br. — Came from the Church of St. Laurence in Nuremberg, through Keim, Inspector of Buildings, into the Wallerstein Collection, and thence to the Chapel of St. Maurice in Nuremberg. — Hall III.

257. St. Wilibald and St. Benedict. The former, in bishop's robes, holds an open book with both hands. The latter, in the black costume of his order, carries a broken glass upon a closed book. Companion-piece to the preceding; to the left.

Size and derivation like the preceding. — Hall III.

Similar to Hans von Kulmbach.

258. (43.) Picture in two divisions: above, the Adoration of the Magi; below, the Descent of the Holy Ghost. Upon the reverse: part of a representation of the Death of the Virgin.

Wood, gold-ground. — 2.41 m h., 1.22 m br. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Came by exchange from the Castle of Nuremberg, in 1810, into the possession of the State. No. 258 and 259 are parts of one altar-piece from Nuremberg, (perhaps the work of Hans Sebastian Lautensack,) two other wings of which are in the Germanic Museum of that city. — Hall II.

259. (58.) Picture in two divisions. Above: the Resurrection of Christ. Below: the Coronation of the Virgin. Upon the reverse: The second half of the representation of the Death of the Virgin.

Wood, gold-ground. — 2.41 m h., 1.22 m br. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Derivation like the preceding. — Hall III.

Hans Leonhard Schaeufelein, born in Nuremberg about 1480, died in Nördlingen 1539 or 40. Successor of A. Dürer. Worked in Nuremberg and in Nördlingen, in which latter place he settled in 1515.

260. (23.) The Death of the Virgin. Upon the reverse: Christ lifted up upon the Cross. The Virgin with the sword piercing her heart, and St. John standing near.

Wood. — 1.27 m h., 1.05 m br. — This picture, with the two following, two others in Schleissheim, (Nos. 157 and 158) and two in the Germanic Museum at Nuremberg.

(Nos. 211 and 212), formed parts of a large altar-work in the Carthusian Convent of St. Peter at Christgarten, of which one panel came by exchange from Nuremberg, in 1801, and another, with the above, from the Wallerstein Collection. — Hall III.

261. (28.) The Coronation of the Virgin. Upon the reverse: Christ fallen under the cross upon the way to Mount Calvary. See No. 260.

Wood. — 1.26 m h., 1.00 m br. — Derivation like the preceding. — Hall III.

262. (33.) Christ saves the Apostle Peter upon the sea. Upon the reverse: Christ mocked and crowned with thorns. See No. 260.

Wood. — 1.26 m h., 1.00 m br. — Derivation like the preceding. — Hall III.

263. (24.) The Virgin receives from an angel the palm as a sign of victory over the Mundane. The Apostles stand, assembled in a hall. Upon the reverse: Christ brought before Pilate. See No. 260.

Wood. — 1.26 m h., 1.00 m br. — Derivation like the preceding. — Hall III.

264. (691.) Christ upon the Mount of Olives. Before him are the three Disciples sleeping; in the left background, Judas with the officers. Signed in the middle, below, with the monogram: S in H next to the little shovel, (Schaeufelein), and the date 1516.

Wood. — 0.49 m h., 0.37 m br. — From the Castle of Nuremberg, by exchange in 1810. — Cab. 5.

265. (Schl. 734.) Christ Crowned with Thorns. Two servants, with the rod, press the crown upon the head of Christ. Before them kneels a man in a green garment, a red cap in his right hand, the mouth widely opened. A bald man, behind the group, grasps with the right hand the shoulder of the Saviour. Through an arched door-way: view of a landscape.

Wood, gold-ground. — 0.51 m h., 0.42 m br. — Wallerstein, formerly Rechberg Collection. — Cab. 5.

266. (Schl. 735.) Head of Christ; full face, the long hair parted in the middle, a purple-brown garment visible at the neck.

Wood, gold-ground. — 0.38 m h., 0.26 m br. — Zweibrücken Gallery. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — (Comp.: M. Schmidt, Zahn's Jahrb. V. p. 51). — Cab. 4.

Barthel Beham,

born in Nuremberg 1502, died in Italy in 1540. Said to have been a pupil of Albert Dürer. Worked until 1524 in Nuremberg; after 1527 in Munich; from 1530 to 35 in the service of the Duke of Bavaria, chiefly at Munich and Landshut.

267. (72.) The Discovery of the Cross. In the presence of St. Helena the dead body of a woman is brought to life by the laying on of the holy cross. At the feet of the dead kneel a bishop, the Empress, and, behind the latter, her followers. The group is surrounded by witnesses of the event, two of whom, on the right, hold the crosses of the thieves. The background is formed by the buildings of an antique market-place. Signed on the left, near the coat-of-arms of Duke William IV.: 1530 BARTHOLOME BEHEM. Inscribed on the right, upon the pavement: CRVX CHRISTI AB HELENA REPERITVR. A MACARIO MORTVA SVS-CITATA ADPROBATVR AN. CCXLIII.

Wood. — 1.14 m h., 1.50 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall III.

Wood. — 0.43 m h., 0.34 m br. — From the Palace of Dachau. — The attribution of this picture to Beham is doubtful. — Cab. 4.

269. (Schl. 37.) Marcus Curtius. The selfsacrificing hero rides upon a gray horse into the yawning chasm. Upon the Forum, with its many buildings, are numerous figures. Upon the base of an obelisk, on the right, is inscribed: M. CVRTIVS IVVENIS BELLO EGREGIVS PRO PATRIA DIIS MANIBVS ARMATUS SE DEVOVIT. TI. LIVIVS LIB. VII. M. D. XXXX. Below, upon the drum of a column, the coats-of-arms of Bavaria and Baden.

Wood. — 1.66 m h., 1.19 m br. — In the Ducal Treasure Chamber at Munich as early as the sixteenth century; belongs to the series of historical pictures executed for Duke William IV. Perhaps finished by the hand of a pupil. — Cab. 5.

Lucas Cranach,

(Lucas Müller) the Elder, born 1492 at Kronach in Upper Franconia; in 1519 City Receiver, from 1537 to 1544 Burgo-master of Wittenberg, died in Weimar Oct. 16th, 1553. Pupil of his father.

270. (734.) The Virgin gives to the Child, standing upon a cushion before her, a bunch of grapes; the Child holds one to the mouth of his mother. A curtain behind, upheld by angels, opens upon the right the view of

Wood. — 0.61 m h., 0.42 m br. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — On a paper upon the back the following inscription: »1558. Dises Maria bildt ist Herrn Raymund Fuggers Seelig und im Schloss Kirchberg gewesen, welches Herr Octavian Secund Fugger Ao. 1589 alls im (ihm) Kirchberg durch die brüederlich thailhung zuegefallen zue sich genommen. Ist sonst von Lucas Kram von Wittemberg dem treffenlichen maler gemacht worden ao. 1512.« 1558. (This picture of the Virgin belonged to Herr Raymund Fugger, deceased and was in the Palace of Kirchberg. It was taken by Herr Octavian Secundus Fugger in 1589, when Kirchberg fell to his share in the division of the estate among the brothers. It was painted in 1512 by that excellent artist Lucas Kram of Wittenberg.) — King Maximilian received this picture in 1824, on the anniversary of his succession, as a gift from Freiherr v. Niedermeyer, and transferred it to the State Collection. — Cab. 4.

271. (83.) The Death of Lucrece. Standing figure, life-size. Upon the dagger the monogram with the date 1524.

Wood. — 1.82 m h., 0.75 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall III.

272. (756.) The Virgin, in a red dress with green mantle, holds the Child upon her lap. Signed on the right with monogram between the date 1525. Knee-piece, round-picture. Upon the reverse: a coat-of-arms with the date 1549.

Wood. — 0.13 in diam. — Wallerstein, formerly Rechberg Collection. — Cab. 4.

273. (736.) The drunken Lot and his two daughters. Evening landscape with the burning Sodom in the background. Upon the way is seen Lot and his daughters, and his wife changed into a pillar of salt. Upon the trunk of a tree on the left, the monogram and 1529.

Wood. — 0.53 m h., 0.37 m br. — Boissérée Collection. — Cab. 5.

274. (733.) Small portraits of Dr. Martin Luther, Philip Melanchthon, and the Elector Frederick III of Saxony. Breast-pieces. Near Luther the inscription: In silentio et spe erit fortitudo vestra. Near Melanchthon, on the right: 1532 and the monogram. The same on the left, upon the portrait of the Elector. In a section of the last, upon a printed strip of paper, the well-known verse. Good specimen of the great number of similiar portraits which were produced in Cranach's studio.

Wood. — 0.22 m h., 0.51 m br. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — The portraits of the reformers are from Ratisbon, that of the Elector from the Boissérée Collection. — Cab. 5.

275. (759.) Moses with Aaron and two prophets. Upon the trunk of a tree on the right the monogram and 1532.

Wood. — 0.26 m h., 0.14 m br. — Zweibrücken Gallery. Fragment from one of the typical allegorical representations of the Fall of Man and the Salvation, often repeated by Cranach and his school. The skeleton arm, seen on the left of the picture, belongs to the group of Death and the Devil thrusting Adam into the Pit. — Cab. 4.

276. (749.) Picture in three divisions. Centre-piece: the Crucifixion, represented with many figures. Right wing: the Crowning with Thorns, and the Bearing of the Cross. Left wing: the Flagellation, Ecce Homo and the Resurrection. Signed upon the cross with the monogram and 1540. Upon the reverse: Christ as a Man of Sorrows, with the Virgin in the attitude of prayer.

Wood. — 0.65 m h., 0.82 m br. — The wings 0.65 m h., 0.20 m br. — Triptych in one frame. From the Cloister of Tegerusee. Perhaps a work of the younger Cranach. — Cab. 5.

277. (729.) Adam and Eve under the Tree of Knowledge.

Wood. — 0.47 m h., 0.35 m br. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. Acquired from the estate of King Maximilian I. — Cab. 4.

278. (56.) The Woman taken in adultery brought before Christ. Signed, above the round window, with the monogram. Knee-piece.

Wood. — 1.16 m h., 1.49 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Lith. N. Strixner (A. G.) — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — The figure upon the left and the upper part of the architecture probably added by J. G. Fischer, (1580 until 1643). A repetition of this picture is in the Germanic Museum in Nuremberg. — Hall III.

279. (1353.) St. Anna, seated upon a grassy bank with the Child, who stretches out his arms to the Virgin sitting near. Beyond, landscape with trees and the ruins of a castle.

Wood. — 0.60 m h., 0.40 m br. — Boiss.-Coll. — Lith. by J. P. Kehr. — Cab. 4.

280. (1363.) Christ upon the cross, between the thieves. At the foot of the cross kneels the Magdalen wringing her hands, supported by St. John. Signed with the monogram upon the foot of the cross of Aschaffenburg. Worked from the beginning of sixteenth century until about 1530. Circumstances of his life unknown.

Wood. — 0.54 m h., 0.32 m br. — Zweibrücken Gallery. — Cab. 4.

Matthias Grünewald,

281. (69.) St. Maurice in rich steel armor, with a gold coronal upon his head, is conversing with Bishop Erasmus, who, in the robes of his office, rests his right hand upon the attributes of his martyrdom, and his left upon a staff. Behind the latter an aged capitular; behind St. Maurice four soldiers, of only two of whom more than the legs can be seen. Figures over life-size.

Wood. 2.26 m h., 1.76 m br. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — (Compare: W. Schmidt. Repertorium für Kunstwissenschaft, I. p. 411.) Painted by order of Cardinal Albert of Brandenburg, Elector of Mayence, for the Collegiate Church of St. Maurice and St. Magdalen, built by him at Halle on the Saale in 1518. After the dissolution of the Chapter, the picture was brought by the Cardinal to Aschaffenburg. Came into the Pinakothek in 1836. — Hall III.

282. (63.) St. Mary Magdalen, sister of Lazarus, in robes of state of the time of the artist, with the vase of ointment in both hands. In the nimbus the name of the saint. Background: landscape. Full figure, standing toward the right.

Wood. — 2.23 m h., 0.76 m br. — This, with the three following panels are of like derivation with the previous picture, of which they must have originally formed the wings. They were not, however, painted by the master of the centre picture, but by an artist whose style resembled that of Cranach, perhaps by Simon of Aschaffenburg, a painter much employed by Cardinal Albrecht before 1545. Came into the Pinakothek in 1836. — Hall III.

283. (68.) St. Lazarus, brother of St. Magdalen and St. Martha; before him the bier. Full figure, over life-size, standing to the left, with the name of the saint in the nimbus. Background: landscape. See No. 282.

Wood. — 2.33 m h., 0.76 m br. — Hall III.

284. (75.) St. Chrysostom, in bishop's robes with book and staff. Background: cloudy sky. Full figure, over life-size. See No. 282.

Wood. — 2.33 m h., 0.76 m br. — Hall III.

285. (70.) St. Martha, with a vase of holy water and sprinkle; at her feet the dragon. In the background, cloudy sky. Full figure, over life-size, to the right. See No. 282.

Wood. — 2.33 m h., 0.76 m br. — Hall III.

Hans Baldung,

called Grien or Grün (figures as »Grünhans« in Dürer's Journal of his Travels), born at Gmünd in Suabia, between 1476 and 1480, died in Strasburg 1545. Became in 1509 a citizen of Strasburg; after 1511 worked both at Freiburg and Strasburg. Studied under his friend, A. Dürer.

Albrecht Altdorfer, born before 1480, lived in Ratisbon after 1505, died in that city on the 12th or 14th of February, 1538, influenced by the works of Albert Dürer.

288. (1369.) Thick beech wood, at the opening of which the knight St. George, is fighting with the dragon. Between the trunks of the trees, view of a distant hilly country. Signed with monogram and the date 1510 upon a tree.

Parchment, mounted upon wood. — 0.27 m h., 0.21 m br. — Boiss. Coll. — Cab. 4.

289. (730.) Susanna at the Bath; the two elders creep forward through the shrubbery. On the right, a splendid building, upon the terrace of which is the stoning of the condemned elders. Background, varied landscape. Monogram and date 1526 on the left below.

Wood. — 0.75 m h., 0.61 m br. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — As early as the sixteenth century in the Ducal Treasure Chamber at Munich. — Cab. 4.

290. (761.) The Victory of Alexander the Great over Darius in the Battle of Arbela, with thousands of small figures on foot and on horseback. In the centre are Alexander and Darius, the former on a running horse with outstretched lance, the latter flying on his hooked chariot, drawn by three cream-colored horses, and looking back towards his victor. The glowing sun rises over a beautiful landscape of cities, mountains and the sea. On the left above is the waxing moon. On the left below, the monogram and the date: 1529

 Above upon the border, a tablet with the inscription:

Wood. — 1.41 m h., 1.19 m br. — As early as the sixteenth century in the Ducal Treasure Chamber at Munich. According to the records of the Royal Treasury the picture was restored by Joh. de Pay in the year 1658, carried to France in 1800, and restored to Bavaria in 1815. — Cab. 5.

291. (752.) The Virgin Mary, with the Child, sits above the clouds, surrounded by angels making music. Two angel boys float down towards her with a crown. Below, hilly landscape with a lake in the centre. Upon the reverse: Mary Magdalen with the vase of ointment approaches the grave of the Lord; angels show her the empty grave-clothes; in the garden she is met by Christ with the banner of victory. The glowing sun rises between clouds.

Wood. — 0.66 m h., 0.13 m br. — From the Palace of Neuburg on the Danube. — Cab. 4.

293. (1370.) Hilly landscape, with pines and shade-trees upon both sides of the way. In the distance, blue mountains and a great lake; view of country dwellings and a town. Monogram on the left upon the trunk of a tree.

Paper mounted on wood. — 0.30 m h., 0.22 m br. — Wallerstein Collection. — Cab. 4.

Ulrich Apt the Elder known to have worked after 1486 in Augsburg; died at that place in 1532.

292. (1368.) Pietà. The Magdalen and Mary Salome kneel on the right; St. John, with folded hands, stands before a tree on the left. Background: a landscape, with the three crosses upon a steep cliff on the right.

Wood. — 0.60 m h., 0.47 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Comp.: W. Schmidt, Zeitsch f. b. K. II p. 245. — Cab. 4.

292a. Triptych. St. Narcissus, Bishop and Martyr, and the Evangelist Matthew, in full figures, under life size, stand in an enclosed flower-garden. The former, at the left, in episcopal robes and with a Gothic crozier, has a dragon at his feet. The latter, at the right, wears a black cap and a white mantle over yellowish-red and green garments. Writing materials hang at his side. He holds under his left arm the Gospel, and supports his right hand upon a halbard. The landscape of the background shows at the left a cavern inhabited by demons, in the centre a castle on a lake, in front of which the martyrdom of the Evangelist is depicted, and at the right a town.

Upon the inner side of the wings, to which the garden and landscape extend, are represented the Virgin standing with the naked Child, and, on the right, St. John the Evangelist, the open Gospel and an inkhorn in his right, the pen in his left hand. Upon the exterior the left wing bears the image of St. Christopher, the right that of St. Margaret with the clained dragon, both standing in niches, and, with exception of the nude parts, painted gray in gray.

On Lindenwood. — Centre-piece 1.35 m h., 1.07 m br. — Wings 1.35 m h., 0.48 m br. — Property of the University of Munich. — Cab. 5.

Melchior Feselen, born probably in Passau, died April 10th, 1538 in Ingolstadt. His style resembles that of Altdorfer and Ostendorfer. Worked in Ingolstadt from 1522 to 1533.

294. (747.) Siege of Rome by Porsena, King of the Etruscans. In the centre, Porsena, mounted, treating with the Roman virgins who were sent to him as hostages under the care of Cloelia. Above, upon the right and left, the richly ornamented escutcheons of Bavaria and Baden (Duke William IV and his wife Jacoba of Baden), with a blank tablet hanging below. Upon the tree in the centre the date and monogram:

Wood. — 1.62 m h., 1.22 m br. — Same derivation as the preceding. — Cab. 5.

Michael Ostendorfer, worked in Ratisbon after 1519, died in that city 1559. Pupil and successor of A. Altdorfer.

296. (760.) Scene from the Apocalypse. God the Father sits upon the throne in a glory, with the Book of Revelation and the Lamb, surrounded by the four evangelical animals and the host of the redeemed. The Angel of Reconciliation, with the cross, stands between the angels of destruction, who spout forth blood, fire and water, and the angels armed with swords, who call mankind to judgment from the four corners of the world. Below, the chosen of the earth are sealed with the seal of God upon the forehead. In the centre, below, the monogram:

Wood. — 0.81 m h., 0.75 m br. — Obtained by King Ludwig I from the estate of Count Rechberg in 1834. — Cab. 5.

School of Ratisbon.

223. (728.) Portrait of Duke William IV of Bavaria, in rich costume. Half figure, to the right. Background, landscape; above, golden festoons. Upon the reverse: the coat-of-arms of the Duke and his wife, with the following inscription upon a scroll: ICH HABS IM HERZ W. H. I. BAIRN — IACOBA H. I. BAIRN IST GANCZ DEIN EIGEN. (I have it at heart, William, Duke of Bavaria. Jacoba, Duchess of Bavaria, is all thine own.) Below, the date 1526.

Wood, curved above. — 0.68 m h., 0.46 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Paintings by the same hand, in the Gallery of Schleissheim (Nos. 115 to 118) and in the National Museum of Munich were attributed by the author of the Schleissheim Catalogue of 1775 to Hans Wertinger, who is known from records to have worked at Landshut from 1494 to 1526 as Court Painter. (Compare: Sighart, Geschichte der bildenden Kunst in Bayern, p. 583.) These works might, however, be attributed with equal probability to the Court Painter Hans Ostendorfer, of Munich. — Cab. 4.

224. (742.) Portrait of the Duchess Maria Jacoba, wife of Duke William IV of Bavaria, born Princess of Baden. Companion-piece to No. 223.

Wood. — 0.68 m h., 0.46 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Cab. 4.

297. (Schl. 366.) Portrait of the Count Palatine John, Administrator of the Bishopric of Ratisbon. Breast-piece. Face to the left, full beard, the hands with many rings, crossed. Upper German, 1523 and 1533.

298. (Schl. 1413.) Death of Lucrece. Over a transparent under-garment she wears a red robe lined with fur, a veil fastened at the fore-head with a pearl brooch, and a rich necklace with a heart-shaped ornament. Upon a shield, above her head, is inscribed: LVCRECIA . ROMANA 1523.

Wood. — 0.67 m h., 0.51 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — It is not certain that this picture is to be attributed to the Upper German School. — Cab. 5.

299. (725.) Portrait of one George Weiss, in a black cap, red coat and black robe. Breast-piece. Signed, upon the back: GOERG WEISZ SEINES ALTERS XXXIII M. D. . XXXIII: Beneath a coat-of-arms: three flowers in horizontal bands, yellow upon red ground, in the upper half field a black half-eagle upon a yellow ground; the lower half field plain yellow.

Wood. — 0.50 m h., 0.35 m br. — Boisserée Collection. — Lith. by Strixner and Schöninger. — Probably the work of a painter of Passau, to whom are also to be attributed that bearing the number 1 in the Gallery of Brussels, and the Portrait of Hans von Schenitz in the André Collection at Paris. — Cab. 5.

Hans Schöpfer the Elder, worked in Munich, where he is mentioned in documents after 1535.

300. (12.) Portrait of the Margrave Philibert of Baden, the right hand upon the side, the left upon the sword. He wears a black cap trimmed with gold, a yellowish-red underdress, and a black robe; a heavy gold chain, and a gold ornament upon a black cord around his neck. Green patterned background. Half-figure, full face.

Canvas. — 0.63 m h., 0.47 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — According to the inscription upon an original repetition of this picture, now in the Germanic Museum in Nuremberg, the work was executed in 1549, and represents the Margrave in his thirteenth year. — Cab. 4.

Hans Muelich,

(later Mielich), born in Munich 1516, died in that city, March 10, 1572. Probably a pupil of M. Ostendorfer; afterwards under Italian influence.

301. (50.) Portrait of a man with a black beard, (perhaps the patrician Liegsalz,) in a black robe trimmed with fur. In the background, a green tapestry. Half-figure, full-face. Signed upon the table covered with blue, under 1540 the leaves of a lemon tree, with date and monogram  Upon a paper under the right hand: ETATIS SVE XXXVIII. See No. 302.

327. (850.) Christ lifted up upon the Cross. Behind the group an oriental horseman. The man in a blue cap and jacket, clasping the foot of the cross, appears to be the portrait of Rembrandt. See: No. 326.

Canvas. — 0.96 m h., 0.72 m br. — Etched by C. Hess. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Painted in 1633 for the Stadtholder of the Netherlands, Prince Frederick Henry; acquired later for the Düsseldorf Gallery. (Comp.: Vosmaer, Rembrandt, p. 497. Bode, Studien, p. 434, 573.) — Cab. 8.

328. (847.) The Ascension. The Saviour, in white garments, rising in a glory, is borne upon the clouds by angels. Below are the disciples, on the left a palm-tree. Signed on the right below. See No. 326. Rembrandt-f. 1636

Canvas, curved above. — 0.92 m h., 0.67 m br. — Etched by C. Hess. Phot. by Hanfstängl. Painted for the Stadtholder of the Netherlands, Prince Frederick Henry; came afterwards into the Düsseldorf Gallery. — (Comp.: Vosmaer, Rembrandt. Bode, work quoted above, p. 512.) — Cab. 8.

329. (851.) The Resurrection. Christ rising from the grave, the cover of which has been lifted by an angel in a glory of light. The watchers, affrighted, rush about in confusion. On the right approach the women. Night-piece. Signed below on the border, to the left: Rembrandt-f. 1639.

See No. 326.

Canvas, mounted on wood, curved above. — 0.94 m h., 0.70 m br. — Etched by

C. Hess. — Painted for the Stadtholder of the Netherlands, Prince Frederick Henry; came afterwards into the Düsseldorf Gallery. (Comp.: Vosmaer, p. 519.) According to the inscription upon the back: »Rembrandt creavit me. P. H. Brinckmann resuscitavit Te 1775«, this picture was restored by the Electoral Court-Painter in Mannheim. (Comp.: Vosmaer and Bode, works quoted above.) — Cab. 8.

330. (852.) The Entombment. Nicodemus and Joseph of Arimathea watch while their servants lay the body of Christ in the grave; at the foot are the Virgin and two holy women. Several disciples are visible at the opening of the cavern, through which is seen a view of Golgotha. Evening twilight. The scene is lighted by the candle held by Nicodemus. See No. 326.

Canvas, curved above. — 0.93 m h., 0.69 m br. — Etched by C. Hess. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Painted, like the preceding, in 1639, for the Stadtholder of the Netherlands. (Comp.: Vosmaer, work quoted above.) — Cab. 8.

331. (848.) The Adoration of the Shepherds. The Virgin Mary sits near the Child, before whom the shepherds stand and kneel, lighted by a lamp which St. Joseph holds over the manger. Signed, in the left corner below: ndt f 1646. See No. 326.

Canvas, curved above. — 0.97 m h., 0.72 m br. — Etched by C. Hess. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Painted for the Stadtholder of the Netherlands, Prince Frederick Henry; came afterwards into the Düsseldorf Gallery. — Cab. 8.

332. (179.) The Sacrifice of Isaac. Abraham with his left hand presses the head of his son upon the altar of wood; an angel, floating downwards, seizes the uplifted right hand from which drops the knife. In the left background the ram. Signed upon the lower border: Rembrandt verandert En ober geschildert 1636.

Canvas. — 1.94 m h., 1.31 m br. — Mannheim Gallery. — Engraved by J. G. Haid. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — (Comp.: Bode, Studien p. 431, 572.) — Hall IV.

Wood, the upper corners cut off. — 0.82 m h., 0.67 m br. — Düsseldorf Gallery.

— Etched by C. Hess in small folio and octavo. Etched by J. L. Raab. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — (Comp.: Bode, Studien zur holländ. Kunstgeschichte, Braunschweig, 1883, who questions the authenticity.) If an imitation, it is not modern, since it is mentioned as being in the Düsseldorf Gallery in 1751. (Comp.: Van Gool, De Neue Schouburg, 1751. II.. p. 839.) — Hall IV.

School of Rembrandt.

334. (1215.) The Repose upon the Flight into Egypt. Night-piece. The Virgin Mary with the Child sits under a group of trees, near a ruined hut and plays with a little dog by the light of a lantern, while St. Joseph is busied about the ass.

Canvas. — 0.72 m h., 0.63 m br. — Düsseldorf Gallery. — Cab. 8.

Jan Livens (Lievens), born in Leyden, Oct. 24th, 1607, died in the same town early in June 1674. Pupil of Joris van Schooten in Leyden, afterwards influenced by Rembrandt. Worked in Leyden, England, Antwerp and the Hague.

335. (306.) An old man with a gray beard and black skull-cap, holding an hour-glass in his right hand. Half figure, full face.

Canvas. — 0.81 m h., 0.68 m br. — Mannheim Gallery. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall IV.

336. (302.) Portrait of an old man with white hair and long beard, in a black coat trimmed with fur, under which the right hand is seen. Breast-piece.

Canvas. — 0.70 m h., 0.58 m br. — Zweibrücken-Gallery. — Hall IV.

Willem de Poorter, born in Haarlem. One of the earliest pupils of Rembrandt. In 1645 was still working in the city of his birth.

337. (Schl. 940.) The Awakening of Lazarus, who is just rising from the grave, surrounded by his kneeling relatives. Signed below, (old forgery): Rembrandt f.

Wood. — 0.28 m h., 0.22 m br. — Zweibrücken Gallery. — Cab. 8.

Ferdinand Bol,

born at Dortrecht in June 1616, died in Amsterdam in July 1680. Pupil of Rembrandt. Worked in Amsterdam.

338. (323.) Portrait of a man, said to be the painter Govaert Flinck (?) with a low cap; the hands lying over each other on the table. The signature: Rembrandt f. 1642, has proved to be spurious and to have been added over a later repainting.

Canvas. — 0.85 m h., 0.71 m br. Düsseldorf Gallery. — Etched by C. Hess. Lith. by W. Flachenecker. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — (Compare: H. Havard, L'Art Hollandais II, 132.) — Hall IV.

339. (329.) Portrait of the wife of the preceding. Signed: Half figure. Companion-piece to No. 338.

F 60L f,

Canvas. — Size, derivation, reproductions and critical literature like the preceding. The inscription: Rembrandt f. 1642 proved to be false, and on its erasure traces of the genuine signature appeared. — Hall IV.

340. (301.) Portrait of a man dressed in black, with a bald head and furrowed brow, the right hand upon his breast.

Wood. — 0.65 m. h., 0.50 m. br. — Mannheim Gallery. The attribution to Bol is doubtful, but it is at least certain that this portrait is by a painter of Rembrandt's school. — Hall IV.

341. (337.) Portrait of a young man, dressed in black, with a broad brimmed felt hat, the right hand upon his breast; in the left his gloves. Half figure.

Canvas. — 1.12 m. h., 1.00 m. br. — Mannheim Gallery. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. Attribution doubtful, in style resembling the work of Rembrandt. — Hall IV.

342. (343.) Portrait of a young woman dressed in black, with a »mill-stone« ruff, wound about her hips a gold chain, which she holds in her right hand, and from which hangs a fan of black ostrich feathers. Half figure. Companion-piece to 341.

Canvas. — Size, derivation, and reproductions like the preceding. — Hall IV.

Govert Flinck,

born in Cleves, Jan. 25th, 1615, died in Amsterdam Feb. 2^d, 1660. Pupil of Lambert Jakobsz in Leeuwarden; afterwards of Rembrandt in Amsterdam.

343. (312.) A Dutch Guard-room. Three soldiers sit at a table, playing at dice; a fourth looks on. Half figures.

Wood. — 0.89 m. h., 1.22 m. br. — Zweibrücken Gallery. — Lith. by F. Piloty. — Hall IV.

Carel Fabritius,

born about 1624, fell a victim to the explosion of a powder magazine in Delft on Oct. 12th, 1654. Pupil of Rembrandt, worked first in Amsterdam, in his last two years in Delft. (Compare: Havard, L'Art Hollandais. IV 1881 p. 43 to 80.)

344. (1295.) Portrait of a young man with long, curled brown hair, in a black cap, red vest with standing collar, and black coat. Breast-piece, to the right.

Canvas. 0.59 m. h., 0.50 m. br. — Mannheim Gallery. The remains of a name, inscribed below on the right, show plainly the letter C. and do not favor the opinion that this picture is by Barn. Fabritius or by Rembrandt himself. — Cab. 10.

Canvas. — 0.98 m. h., 0.77 m. br. — Mannheim Gallery. From the Palace in Würzburg. (Compare: Bode, Studien zur Holländischen Malerei, 1883, who ascribes this picture to Rembrandt.) — Hall IV.

Barent Fabritius, worked from 1657 to 1659 in London, otherwise at Delft or Amsterdam. Paintings by his hand bear dates from 1656 to 1672.

346. (856.) Portrait of a young man with a red cap, the shirt open upon the neck. Breast-piece.

Canvas, mounted on wood. — 0.64 m h., 0.47 m br. — From the Electoral Palace in Munich. Etched by C. Hess. — Attribution uncertain. — Hall IV.

born before 1615, worked in Haarlem from 1633 to 1671.

347. (859.) Abraham sending away Hagar with her son Ishmael. In the background Sarah with her son Isaac. Evening.

Wood. — 0.42 m h., 0.53 m br. — Zweibrücken Gallery. — Cab. 8.

Gerbrandt van den Eeckhout, born in Amsterdam Aug. 19th, 1621, died in that city September, 1674. Pupil of Rembrandt. Worked in Amsterdam.

348. (871.) Christ at the age of twelve, sitting upon the step of a prayer-desk, with his right hand uplifted, speaks to the doctors sitting and standing about him. Signed on the left below:

G. v. Eeckhout fec.
A^o 1662

Canvas. — 0.68 m h., 0.83 m br. — Düsseldorf Gallery. — Etched by C. Hess. — Cab. 8.

349. (204.) Abraham sending away Hagar and her son Ishmael. In the right background Sarah and the little Isaac look after them through a window. Full figures; life-size. Pieced out below and above.

Canvas. — 2.53 m h., 1.83 m br. — From the Archiepiscopal Palace in Würzburg. — Hall IV.

350. (213.) Isaac, resting upon his couch, gives the paternal blessing to Jacob, in the presence of Rebecca. Signed on the right below (imperfectly preserved):

Canvas. — 1.07 m h., 1.18 m br. — From the Archiepiscopal Palace in Würzburg. — Hall IV.

J Van Den..

Jacob A. Backer,

born in Haarlingen 1608 or 1609 (?); died in Amsterdam Aug. 27th, 1651. Pupil of Lambert Jacobsz in Leeuwarden; after about 1632 with Rembrandt; later still, worked independently as a portrait painter in Amsterdam.

351. (924.) Portrait of a man dressed in black, with a black cap. Profile to the right, breast-piece.

Wood, originally oval. — 0.66 m in the larger, 0.50 m in the smaller diameter. Acquired, with the companion-piece, No. 352, from the Court Painter Charles Henry Brandt in Munich, 1784. — Cab. 7.

J. B.

352. (942.) Portrait of a young woman in a brownish red dress, with a chain of gold and precious stones about her breast and a string of pearls in her hair. Breast-piece. Companion-piece to No. 351. Signed on the left below:

Wood, originally oval. — 0.66 m in the larger, 0.50 m in the smaller diameter. — Derivation like the preceding. — Cab. 7.

Backer.

Salomon Koninck,

born in Amsterdam in 1609, died in that city early in August, 1656. Pupil of D. Colyns, Fr. Venant and Cl. Moeyaert; influenced by the works of Rembrandt; worked in Amsterdam.

353. (882.) Christ as a boy teaching among the Pharisees and doctors in the Temple at Jerusalem.

Wood. — 0.84 m h., 0.71 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Etched by C. Hess. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Cab. 9.

Reynier van Gherwen, is said by A. Bredius to have worked in Amsterdam, and to have died at that place late in 1661, or early in 1662.

354. (222.) Abraham, about to sacrifice his son Isaac, speaks to him for the last time. The angel appears above. Full figures, life-size. Signed near the right leg of Isaac:

Canvas. — 2.10 m h., 1.44 m br. — From the Archiepiscopal Palace in Würzburg. — Hall IV.

Aart de Gelder,

born in Dordrecht October 26, 1645, died in that town August, 1727. Pupil of Rembrandt. Worked at Dordrecht.

355. (200.) A Jewish Bride. Two women are arranging the white veil of the maiden, two others are visible in the background on the right, behind a table covered with red. Knee-piece.

Canvas. — 1.37 m h., 1.57 m br. — Mannheim Gallery. — Hall IV.

356. (Schl. 651.) Study for the portrait of a man with a gray beard, the head covered with a high, fur cap; the right arm lying upon a table, the hand holding a cane. Half figure. Pieced out upon all sides.

Canvas. — 1.07½ m h., 0.81½ m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Etched by C. Hess in 1788, and by M. Kellerhoven. — Hall IV.

Jan Victoors, pupil of Rembrandt. Born about 1620 in Amsterdam, died at that place after 1672.

357. (239.) The aged Tobias, with his family, thanks God for his restored sight, and for the happy return of his son, while the accompanying angel, Raphael, disappears in the clouds. Full figures, life-size. Signed upon a strip of paper lying upon the ground:

Canvas. — 1.62 m h., 2.04 m br. — From the estate of King Maximilian I. — Hall IV.

358. (846.) Portrait of an old, bearded man in a red coat and black cap. Breast-piece, full face.

Canvas, mounted on wood. — 0.63 m h., 0.46 m br. — Mannheim Gallery. — Cab. 10.

Frans Hals, born in Antwerp 1580, died in Haarlem towards the end of Aug. 1666. Pupil of Karel van Mander of that city. Worked in Haarlem.

359. (311.) Group of family portraits. On a veranda opening upon a park sit the father and mother, surrounded by six children, of whom two boys on the left are occupied with a drawing; a third, on the right, plays with a dog, and three girls are gathered about a basket of fruit.

Canvas. — 2.22 m h., 2.97 m br. — Electoral Gallery in Munich. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. The attribution to Hals is based upon the old inventories, and is accepted by Waagen and Bayersdorfer, but has been doubted by many other authorities. It is only certain that two Portraits of Girls in the Gallery at Cassel, (Nos. 122 and 123) hitherto ascribed to Van Dyck, are by the same hand. — Hall IV.

Jan Verspronck,

born in Haarlem 1597, died in that city towards the end of June 1662. Pupil of Frans Hals. After 1632, in the Guild of Haarlem.

360. (Schl. 447.) Portrait of a woman in a black dress, cuffs and collar edged with lace, the hands lying crossed, the right holding a fan. Half figure, to the left.

FLEMISH PAINTERS.

Joost van Cleef, probably born in Antwerp, died in that city Nov. 10, 1540. Entered the Guild in 1511. Worked chiefly at the French and English courts.

660. (97.) Portrait of a man dressed in black, wearing a black cap; the overgarment fastened in front with four ties. The left hand, with a seal ring upon the forefinger, is lifted in a gesture of demonstration. On the right, above, part of a coat-of-arms. Half-figure, full face.

Wood. — 0.77 m h., 0.58 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — This picture was formerly thought to be a work of the younger Holbein, and from an inscription in Dutch upon the back, was wrongly considered a portrait of Martin Luther. This much discussed »portrait with the beautiful hand« appears to have suffered from extensive restorations, notably in the head, which doubtless has lost in great measure its original coloring and softness of modelling, yet making all due allowance for this it still cannot be considered to display the hand of Holbein. — Cab. 14.

Antonis Moor,

commonly called Antonio Moro, born in Utrecht, about 1512, died in Antwerp between 1576 and 1578. Pupil of Jan Scorel, developed in Italy through the study of Titian. Entered the Guild of Antwerp in 1547. After 1552 Court Painter to Charles the Fifth, and to Philip II of Spain; worked in Utrecht, Antwerp and at the courts of Madrid, Lisbon, London and Brussels.

Peter Paul Rubens,

born end of June 1577, at Siegen in County Nassau, where his father, John Rubens, public officer of the law, who had fled from Antwerp to Cologne in 1568, was in exile between 1573 and 1577. The artist died in Antwerp May 30th, 1640; was a pupil of the landscape painter F. Verhaegt, of Antwerp, afterwards of Otho van Veen (Otto Vaenius). He became a free master in the Guild of St. Luke in 1598; was in Italy from 1600 to 1608, chiefly in Mantua, visited Venice, Rome, Genoa, and also Spain; after this, with exception of short journeys to Spain, Paris and England, he worked in Antwerp until his death.

724. (257.) The philosopher Seneca, his veins opened, and clad only with a cloth about his loins, stands in a metal basin. On the right is a physician; on the left kneels a young pupil, recording the words of his dying master. Behind these are two Praetorian guards.

Wood. — 1.81 m h., 1.52 m br. — Düsseldorf Gallery. — Engr. in the edition of Seneca by J. Lipsius, published by C. Galle. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall VI.

725. (285.) The Victory of Virtue over Drunkenness and Licentiousness. A warrior in armor, with a red mantle, his foot upon a prostrate satyr, is crowned by Victory with a laurel wreath. The back of the naked figure of Licentiousness is seen on the right.

Canvas. — 2.16 m h., 1.96 m br. — Düsseldorf Gallery. — Hall VI.

726. (292.) The Martyrdom of St. Laurence. The Saint is placed upon the gridiron by two officers, while a third puts faggots upon the flames. Behind the surrounding soldiers and knights is the statue of Jupiter. In the air is an angel with a wreath and palm branch.

Wood. — 2.44 m h., 1.74 m br. — Düsseldorf Gallery. — Engr. in 1621 by S. Vorsterman with some alterations in composition. — Hall VI.

727. (291.) The Rape of the Daughters of Leukippos, Phoebe and Hilaeira, by the twins Castor and Pollux. The bridles of the horses are held by cupids. Figures life size.

Canvas. — 2.22 m h., 2.09 m br. — Düsseldorf Gallery. — Engr. by V. Green and J. Bankel. Engr. and etched by C. Hess. Lith. by W. Flachenecker and F. Stadler. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall VI.

728. (263.) The Garland of Fruit. Seven naked children carry the garland. In the background, a cliff and the view of a landscape on the left. Figures life-size.

Canvas — 1.17 m h., 2.03 m br. — Düsseldorf Gallery. — Engr. by H. Schmitz and L. Schöninger. Etched by L. Raab. Lith. by J. Piloty. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall IV.

729. (266.) The Garland of Flowers. A picture of the Madonna, in a black frame, with the Child, quite naked, standing upon her knee, surrounded by a rich wreath of flowers and by eleven angel children. The flowers painted by Jan Brueghel.

Wood. — 1.81 m h., 2.09 m br. — Düsseldorf Gallery. — Hall V.

730. (289.) The Sleeping Diana. Diana, fallen asleep after the hunt, with two nymphs, is watched by two satyrs. The group is surrounded by dead game; in the background Amor is watching the dogs. Landscape and animals by J. Brueghel.

Wood. — 0.66 m h., 1.09 m br. — Düsseldorf Gallery. — Lith. by C. Straub. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall VI.

731. (288.) The Repose after the Hunt. Diana resting in a wood, surrounded by her nymphs and dogs. On the right a stag is pursued, and a boar unladen from a mule. Animals and landscape by J. Brueghel. School of Rubens.

Wood. — 0.66 m h., 1.09 m br. — From the Palace of Nymphenburg. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall IV.

732. (901.) The Defeat of Sennacherib. The angels of the Lord, appearing in the clouds with lightning and with flaming sword, put to flight the Assyrian King, with his army and followers.

Wood. — 0.95 m h., 1.21 m br. — Düsseldorf Gallery. — Engr. by K. Soutman. Lith. by F. and C. Piloty. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Cab. 12.

733. (909.) The Conversion of St. Paul. Saul is thrown from his horse, in the midst of his affrighted companions. Servants hasten to raise him. In the clouds appears Christ with two angels.

Wood. — 0.95 m h., 1.21 m br. — Düsseldorf Gallery. — Lith. by C. Piloty. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Cab. 12.

734. (245.) The Lion Hunt. Seven men, four of whom are mounted, are fighting with a couple of lions.

One of the riders is being dragged from his horse by the lion, while three others threaten the animal with lances and sword. One of the men on foot has fallen; the second, thrown down by the lioness, tries to keep her off with a dagger, assisted by the third who hastens to the scene.

Canvas. — 2.47 m h., 3.75 m br. — Engr. by Schelle à Bolswert. Etched by J. L. Raab. Lith. by F. Piloty and J. Wölffle. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — In a letter of April 28th, 1618, to Sir Dudley Carleton, in which Rubens offers a repetition of this picture for sale, he remarks that he had painted the original for the Duke, afterwards Elector, Maximilian of Bavaria. (Comp.: A. Rosenberg, Rubensbriefe, Leipzig, 1881, p. 44.) — Hall VI.

735. (258.) Christ, enthroned upon the clouds, surrounded by the Virgin, the saints and the patriarchs, beckons with the uplifted right hand to the arisen souls of the blessed, who are guided upward by angels. The left hand of the Judge of the World is turned downward, toward the group of the damned, who are threatened with lightning by St. Michael, and dragged by devils into the abyss of Hell. In the air, above Christ, float the sceptre and the flaming sword; and in a cloud of glory appear God the Father, and the Dove.

Canvas. — 7.05 m h., 4.74 m br. — Engr. by Corn. Vischer. Engr. and etched by C. Hess. Lith. in the publication of the Gallery by Piloty and Loehle. — From the before-mentioned letter of Rubens to Sir Dudley Carleton, in which he offers him also a smaller repetition of this picture, it appears that the present work was painted for the Count Palatine Wolfgang William of Neuburg for 3500 guildens. (Comp.: Rosenberg, work quoted above, p. 43 and 49.) It formerly decorated the High Altar of the Church of the Jesuits at Neuburg, but in 1692, after many remonstrances by the Roman Curia on account of the objectionable nude figures in the picture (comp.: Royal Archives, Familiensachen XV. 122), it was removed to the Düsseldorf Gallery. The sketch now in the Dresden Gallery, formerly regarded as the original of this painting, has been proved by Bode to be a later copy. — Hall VI.

736. (264.) The Fall of the Angels. St. Michael, armed with shield and flaming sword and assisted by four other angels, drives the fallen host into the abyss. Above is the figure of God the Father.

Canvas. — 4.34 m h., 2.89 m br. — Engr. by L. Vorsterman, 1621. — According to a letter from Rubens to the Duke Wolfgang William of Neuburg, dated Oct. 11th, 1619, this picture was begun in that year by one of his best pupils from a design by the master, and finished by the hand of Rubens himself. It was placed in Neuburg, probably in the Church of the Jesuits (Comp.: Rosenberg, work quoted above, p. 55) and removed to Düsseldorf by the Elector John William. — Hall VI.

737. (250.) The Fall of the Damned. In a wild crowd the devils sieze their victims, and drag them down into the pit of Hell. Above, in a glory, appears St. Michael, with other angels, sending forth lightning flashes.

Wood. — 2.86 m h., 2.24 m br. — Düsseldorf Gallery. — Engr. by P. Soutman in 1642, (right side of the picture only). Etched by Rich. van Orley. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall VI.

738. (889.) The Last Judgment. Above appears Christ, enthroned upon clouds, with the Virgin and other saints. Below them floats the Archangel Michael, who, assisted by many angels, thrusts the damned into Hell, whither other sinners below are also dragged by devils. In the left background is the Resurrection of the Blessed.

Wood, curved above. — 1.82 m h., 1.20 m br. — Düsseldorf Gallery. — Engr. by J. Snyderhoef in 1642. — Phot. by J. Albert and by Hanfstängl. — Cab. 12.

739. (281.) The Woman of the Apocalypse. Allegorical representation of the victory of the Christian Religion over Idolatry and Vice. In the centre, the winged Virgin, with the Child upon the globe, treading upon the head of the Serpent. Above is God the Father, and, on the left, St. Michael, with the help of angels, thrusts the Seven Headed Dragon into the abyss. In the background, the city of Freising, with the Cathedral. Landscape by Lucas van Uden. Figures over life-size.

Canvas, curved above. — 5.53 m h., 3.69 m br. — According to C. Meichelbeck, Frey-singische Chronica, Freising 1724, p. 288 this picture was ordered by the Bishop Ernst of Freising (died 1612) for the Cathedral of that place, at an expense of 3000 florins. Brought to Munich in 1804. — Hall VI.

740. (252.) The Nativity. Shepherds and shepherdesses, in attitudes of devotion, approach the manger, where the Virgin, turning back the swaddling clothes, displays the Child. Groups of angels float above with the glory. Figures over life-size.

Canvas, rounded above. — 4.75 m h., 2.70 m br. — Engr. by P. Pontius. Phot. by Hanfstängl. Painted in 1619, by order of Count Palatine Wolfgang William of Neuburg for the Court Church of the Jesuits in Neuburg. (Compare the letters of Rubens to the Count Palatine dated Oct. 11th, and Dec. 7th, 1619, and July 24th, 1620, also A. Rosenberg, work quoted above, p. 55.) This picture decorated the side altar of that Church until, in 1703, the Elector John William of the Palatinate demanded and received it, with its companion-piece the Descent of the Holy Ghost, for the Düsseldorf Gallery. (Comp.: the letters of the Elector dated May 24th, and June 13th, 17th, 1703, Royal Archives, Familiensachen XV. 122). — Hall VI.

741. (290.) The Descent of the Holy Ghost. Figures over life-size.

Canvas, rounded above. — 4.70 m h., 2.73 m br. — Engr. by Paul Pontius in 1627, with the composition much altered. Came originally from Neuburg, see the note to the preceding companion-piece. — Hall VI.

742. (917.) The Battle of the Amazons. In the centre of the bridge over the river Thermodon are Theseus, King of Athens, and Talestris, Queen of the Amazons, with many followers, in violent conflict; even the prancing horses are biting one another. Above this middle group a half naked warrior siezes the banner of a flying Amazon, who, holding to it desperately, is thrown backwards from her horse by a blow from the drawn sword of the leader. Upon the right of the bridge is the wild flight of the conquered and of the riderless horses. On the left, warriors and Amazons, in attack and flying defence, ride over dead bodies into the river; on the right two Amazons, with their horses, fall into the flood. Under the arch of the bridge is seen in the distance a boat, overfilled with the fugitives and sinking; in the background, a town in flames.

Wood. — 1.21 m h., 1.65 m br. — Finished in 1619. Came about 1690 from the possession of van der Gheest, of Antwerp, into the Düsseldorf Gallery. Engr. by L. Vorsterman, in 1623, by G. S. and J. G. Facius, by C. Danckerts, published by G. Duchange, and by C. Hess. Etched by J. L. Raab. Lith. by F. Hohe and C. Feederle. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Cab. 12.

743. (884.) The Two Satyrs. One, facing directly forwards, holds grapes in his right hand; the other, seen in profile, drinks the juice of the grape from a shell. Breast-pieces. Pieced out on all sides.

Wood. — 0.76 m h., 0.66 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Lith. by F. Piloty and S. Braun. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Cab. 12.

744. (255.) Samson taken by the Philistines. Samson, springing up from the couch of Delilah, falls into the hands of the Philistines, who overpower him. Delilah, with the shears still in her hand, is supported by an aged serving woman.

Canvas. — 1.18 m h., 1.32 m br. — Düsseldorf Gallery. — Engr. by Val. Green and C. Hess. Lith. by F. Piloty. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall VI.

745. (278.) Susanna, on the left, sitting in a grotto by a fountain, is surprised by the elders, climbing over a balustrade, at whom a dog is barking.

Wood. — 0.77 m h., 1.10 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Cab. 12.

746. (261.) Christ and the Penitent Sinners. The resurrected Saviour, with a gesture of forgiveness, stands before the bowed and weeping Magdalen, the penitent thief, King David and St. Peter.

Wood. — 1.44 m h., 1.28 m br. — Düsseldorf Gallery. — Engr. by Val. Green and N. Lauwers. Lith. by F. Piloty. Etched by J. L. Raab. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall VI.

747. (259.) Christ, with St. Peter and St. John, sitting at a table before a colonnade, and receiving the accounts from the representatives of the religious and lay chapters. A priest in a choir-robe, led forward by an angel, kneels upon the steps at his feet.

Wood. — 3.03 m h., 1.48 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Lith. by F. Piloty. — Hall VI.

748. (262.) Christ upon the Cross. Background, night sky over the city of Jerusalem.

Wood. — 1.43 m h., 1.92 m br. — Düsseldorf Gallery. — Engr. by Schelte à Bolswert. Lith. by F. Piloty. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall VI.

749. (272.) The Trinity. God the Father, enthroned upon the globe, which is upheld by three angels, holds the sceptre; on the right, Christ with the Cross. Between the two floats the Dove. Figures over life-size.

Canvas. — 3.14 m h., 2.42 m br. — Engr. by Weissenhahn in 1777. — Lith. by F. Piloty. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Taken in 1803, from the Church of the Augustines in Munich. — Hall VI.

752. (271.) Meleager gives to Atalanta the head of the Calydonian Boar, upon the fore legs of which he places his left foot. In the foreground, a cupid and five dogs. Background, landscape. Figures life-size.

Canvas. — 1.97 m h., 3.02 m br. — Schleissheim Gallery. — Central group engraved by J. Meyssens. Lith. by F. Piloty. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall VI.

753. (249.) The Reconciliation of the Romans and the Sabines. Between the contestants appear the abducted Sabine women, with their children, and intercede for peace. Hersilia is in the front. Figures life-size.

Canvas. — 2.50 m h., 3.37 m br. — Mannheim Gallery. — Engr. by H. Sintzenich. Lith. by F. Piloty. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — The original sketch for this picture is in the collection of Lord Ashburton in London. — Hall VI.

754. (265.) The Drunken Silenus. The sot staggers to the left, surrounded by a train of satyrs and Bacchantes, and supported from behind by a negro. In the left foreground, a drunken female satyr is giving suck to her young ones, who lie upon the ground. Behind her a tiger snatches after a branch of grapes held by a satyr. On the right a boy with a pair of goats.

Wood. — 2.05 m h., 2.11 m br. — Düsseldorf Gallery. — Engr. by Rich. van Orley. Phot. by Albert and Hanfstängl. — Hall VI.

755. (273.) War and Peace. The happy life of mankind under the blessings of peace is protected by Minerva against the aggressive God of War. A woman, almost naked, presses her nursling to her breast. She is surrounded by numerous offspring, to whom Pan, from his position among the branches of a tree, is handing down fruit. In the air above Mars, on the right, are the Furies of War, and, in the background, a city in flames.

Canvas. — 2.28 m h., 3.35 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall VI.

Canvas. — 2.51 m h., 3.54 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall VI.

757. (269.) The Massacre of the Innocents. In the foreground, to the right and left, a bloody struggle between the executioners and the mothers; in the centre, a group of mourning women, one of whom is insanely kissing her dead child. Armed soldiers come forth from the portico of a palace. Three angels, in the air, strew flowers.

Wood. — 1.98 m h., 3.02 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Engr. by P. Pontius, 1643, and C. Dupuis, 1709. Lith. by Piloty and Loehle. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall VI.

758. (276.) The Entombment. St. John and the Virgin support the body, at whose feet are the two other Marys, Nicodemus and Joseph of Arimathea. In the background, two maids, with vessels, come down to the rock tomb. Sketch.

Wood. — 0.83 m h., 0.66 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Cab. 12.

759. (286.) Pastoral Scene. A half naked shepherd, with a bag-pipe on his back, embracing a young woman. Portraits of the artist and his second wife. Full figures, life-size.

Wood. — 1.59 m h., 1.33 m br. — Mannheim Gallery. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall VI.

760. (916.) Landscape. In a wood, near swampy water, graze a herd of cows. One maid is milking, while another and a man are busied with the milk vessels. On the left, distant view.

Wood. — 1.71 m h., 1.03 m br. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Bought of Gisbert of Cologne in 1698 by the Elector Max Emanuel. — Cab. 12.

Wood. — 0.76 m h., 0.66 m br. — Düsseldorf Gallery. — Etched by Rem. Eynhonedts. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Cab. 12.

763. (910.) St. Francis de Paula, floating in the air, is called upon for help by those infected with the plague. Gray in gray, partly colored.

Wood. — 0.64 m h., 0.49 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Cab. 12.

764. (886.) The Instruction of the Princess Maria de Medici. Apollo, Minerva and Mercury teach her the arts and sciences; the Graces bestow upon her a crown.

Wood. — 0.49 m h., 0.39 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — The numbers from 764 to 779, inclusive, are the sketches for a series of paintings ordered, early in the year 1622, by Maria de Medici, widow of King Henry IV of France, for the new Palais du Luxemburg. They were finished by the artist in June 1625. Of the twenty-one paintings, now in the Louvre, eighteen are represented by sketches in the Pianothek. The Three Fates, the Marriage Festival at Lyons, the Reconciliation of the Queen with Louis XIII, and the Triumph of Truth are lacking in this collection of sketches. On the other hand sketch No. 776, the Banishment of the Queen to Blois, is not in the Paris series, probably having been refused by the Queen. These sketches were originally in the possession of the Abbé de Saint-Ambroise, Almoner of Maria de Medici. — Cab. 12.

765. (887.) King Henry IV. of France receiving the portrait of the Princess Maria. Hymen and Cupid deliver the portrait; the Genius of France councils the union. In the clouds are Jupiter and Juno. See No. 764.

Wood. 0.49 m h., 0.37 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Cab. 12.

766. (893.) The Wedding of the Princess Maria. The marriage was consummated Oct. 5th, 1600, in the Church of S. Maria del Fiore at Florence, by proxy, through the Grand Duke Ferdinand, uncle of the bride, in the presence of the Archduchess Johanna of Austria, the Duc de Bellegarde and the Marquis de Silery. The blessing was bestowed by Cardinal Aldobrandini. See No. 764.

Wood. — 0.65 m h., 0.50 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Cab. 12.

767. (888.) The Reception of the newly married Queen of France in the harbor of Marseilles, Nov. 3^d, 1600. The allegorical representatives of France and of the city greet her upon the ship, which is attended by marine deities. See No. 764.

Wood. — 0.64 m h., 0.50 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Cab. 12.

768. (896.) The Coronation of Queen Maria, May 13th. 1610. The ceremony is performed by the Cardinal Joyeuse, in the Church of St. Denis, in the presence of the Dauphin and his sister. Upon a stand in the background is the King. See No. 764.

Wood. — 0.54 m h., 0.92 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Cab. 12.

Wood. — 0.24 m h., 0.21 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Engr. by L. Vorstermann. — Cab. 13.

Canvas. — 0.87 m h., 0.74 m br. — Düsseldorf Gallery. — Etched by van Dyck himself. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — This portrait, which agrees with the etched portrait of Brueghel by van Dyck, appears to have been painted by another companion or assistant of Rubens. — Hall VII.

862. (Schl. 432.) Study head, to the left, in the attitude of an apostle deep in thought, the chin supported upon the left hand.

Wood. — 0.57½ m h., 0.42 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. Perhaps an early work of van Dyck. A similar painting is in the Gallery at Augsburg, and three others are in the City Gallery at Bamberg. (Comp.: Rooses, Gesch. d. Antw. Malerschule, German Ed. p. 278.)

863. (943.) Study head of a child, to the left, with a yellow drapery over the head and left shoulder. Sketch.

Wood. — 0.45 m h., 0.39 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Cab. 15.

Pupils and Successors of van Dyck.

864. (Schl. 258.) Jupiter and Antiope. The latter, partially covered with a blue cloth, lies sleeping upon the ground. Behind her is Jupiter, in the form of a satyr, with the eagle; above are cupids holding a brown drapery.

Canvas. — 2.03 m h., 1.90 m br. — Düsseldorf Gallery. — Engr. by C. Hess and V. Green. Lith. by J. A. Mayr. — Notwithstanding the belief long held that this picture is by van Dyck, the authenticity must still be considered as doubtful. It is probably the work of Thomas Wileboords, (1613—1656). (Comp.: Smith, Cat. rais. III. 73. Rooses, Gesch. d. Antwerpener Malerschule German Ed. p. 481.) — Hall VII.

865. (176.) Portrait of a young man dressed in black looking to the left, the right hand with fingers spread, lying upon the breast. Breast-piece.

Wood, gold-ground. — 0.75 m h., 0.44 m br. — Bought by Dillis in Florence in 1809. — Lith. by F. Rechberg in his Raphael. — Cab. 17.

School of Cimabue,

first quarter of the fourteenth century.

979. (1131.) Painting in three horizontal divisions.

1. Above: the Virgin enthroned with the Child, near them St. Clara and St. Agnes (?).

2. Centre: Christ washing the feet of the Apostles.

3. Below: The Last Judgment; Christ within a mandorla of clouds, surrounded by angels and saints, floats above the scene of the Resurrection. An open sarcophagus separates the group of the blessed from that of the damned, which latter are flooded by a stream of fire, going forth from the feet of Christ. Between the celestial and the terrestrial scenes are two groups of saints, as breast-pieces. Above, eight family banners.

Wood, patterned gold-ground. — 0.61 m h., 0.28 m br. — This, with the following tablet, formed a diptych received as a gift by King Ludwig I in 1843. — Cab. 17.

980. (1132.) Painting in three horizontal divisions:

1. Above: Christ upon the Cross between the two thieves. At the foot are the Magdalen, St. John and the Virgin, who, with the sword in her breast, falls into the arms of the women. Round about are the usual accessories.

2. The Scourging of Christ, with Simon of Cyrene bearing the Cross.

3. St. Francis receiving the stigmata, surrounded by St. Elizabeth, St. Bartholomew, St. Clara (?) and St. Mary of Egypt.

Wood. Tempera. — 0.80 m h., 0.48 m br. — Private property of the King. — Cab. 17.

1001. (1159.) The Adoration of the Magi; with their followers, mounted and on foot.

Wood. Tempera. — 0.66 m h., 0.57 m br. — This picture shows the influence of Gentile da Fabriano upon the artist, who must have been a successor of Fiesole. — Cab. 17.

Tuscan, about 1450.

1002. (Schl. 1052.) St. Sebastian, bound to the trunk of a tree and shot with cross-bows by two soldiers standing before him. Half-figures. Two angels float downward, with crown and palm. Background, landscape.

Wood, gable above. Tempera. — 1.22 m h., 0.81 m br. — Bought in 1808, by von Dillis, in Florence. Formerly attributed to Andrea del Castagno. — Cab. 18.

1003. (562.) The Virgin, sitting upon a throne in a niche, holds the Child sitting upon her lap. On the right, the Saints, Laurence, Anthony the Hermit and Julian; on the left, Lucia, Cyriacus and John Gualbertus, whose names are inscribed on a marble step below, in the order here given.

In the centre: $\hat{A} \hat{D}$. MCCCCLVIII.

Wood. Tempera on gold-ground. — 1.65 m h., 0.65 m br. — Private property of the King. — Hall VIII.

Tuscan, about 1470.

1004. (1160.) The Nativity. The Child, lying upon the ground at the left, is adored by the Virgin and three angels. Aside, at the right, is St. Joseph asleep. In the left background, upon a cliff, the Annunciation to the Shepherds; and on the right, the Approach of the Magi with their followers. Round.

Wood. Tempera. — 0.81 m in diameter. — Acquired in 1808, by von Dillis in Florence. (Comp.: Crowe and Cavalcaselle III 118.) — Cab. 17.

Fra Filippo Lippi, born in Florence about 1405, died in Spoleto, Oct. 9th, 1469. Pupil of Masaccio; influenced by Fra Angelico. Worked in Florence, Padua, Prato and Spoleto.

1005. (554.) The Annunciation. The Virgin, standing before a prayer-desk in a grand hall with pilasters and view into a garden, receives the message of the angel. Gabriel, with a wreath of roses upon his head and a branch of lilies in his left hand, kneels before her. A second angel, also with a branch of lilies, stands in the doorway on the left. Above, God the Father, between two angels, sending forth the Holy Ghost.

Wood. Tempera. — 2.02 m h., 1.80 m br. — Came from Santa Maria Primerana in Fiesole into the private possession of the King and thence to the State in 1850. (Comp.: Crowe and Cavalc. III 82). — Hall VIII.

1006. (1169.) The Virgin, sitting upon a chair, turned to the right, holds the Child upon her lap. Half-figure. In the background, a varied landscape.

Wood. — 0.75 m h., 0.53 m br. — Acquired in 1808 from the Abbate Rivanni, in Florence. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. (Comp.: Crowe and Cavalc. III 81). — Hall VIII.

1007. (1164.) The Annunciation. In a Renaissance building, which opens a view into the carpenter's work-shop and into the sleeping-room, the Virgin, kneeling before a prayer-desk, receives the message of the angel.

Wood. — 0.70 m h., 0.79 m br. — Acquired, 1808, from Abbate Rivanni in Florence. This work of the School of Fra Filippo was formerly attributed to Masolino. (Comp.: Crowe and Cavalc. III 81). — Cab. 17.

Filippino Lippi,

born in Prato 1457 or 1458, died in that city April 18, 1504. Pupil of Fra Diamante and of Sandro Botticelli. Worked in Florence and Rome.

1008. (563.) Christ, with the marks of the wounds, appears to the Virgin, both kneeling. Above, in a golden glory, is God the Father; upon each side, half-figures of the Annunciation. Background, landscape with figures.

Wood. Tempera. — 0.29 m h., 1.48 m br. — (Comp.: Crowe and Cavalc. III 193).

Upon the gradino, in small figures: The Man of Sorrows in the tomb, held by an angel; on the left, Saints Francis, Louis of Toulouse and Bernardino of Siena; on the right, Dominick, Clara and Catharine of Siena.

Wood. Tempera. — 0.29 m h., 1.48 m br. — This picture formerly belonged to the Barefoot Monks of Palco near Prato. The order for it was first given to Domenico Ghirlandajo. June 25th, 1491, but it was executed by Filippino Lippi, 1495. Came to the State from the private possession of King Ludwig I in 1850. — Hall VIII.

1009. (538.) The Deposition. The body, lying on the lap of the Virgin, is supported at the head by an angel and at the feet by Mary Magdalen. Behind stand, on the left, St. John the Baptist; on the right, St. James Major. In the clouds are three angels with the instruments of the Passion. Background, landscape. Full figures, life-size.

Wood. — 1.86 m h., 0.95 m br. — Acquired by King Ludwig I., in 1808, from the House of Capponi in Florence, as a Ghirlandajo. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — According to Milanesi, this picture was the work of Jacopo del Sellajo, who died 1493, and from whom the Compagnia di Balestri had ordered it for the Chapel of Cestello, today called S. Frediano. K. E. v. Liphart, on the other hand, ascribes it to his son Arcangelo di Jacopo, born 1478, died 1530 or 1531, who, by the decision of the Judge, Ridolfo Ghirlandajo Bugiardini, March 24th, 1516 or 1517, received 170 lire as the price of the work. The attribution to Filippino, followed by us, is based upon the authority of Crowe and Cavalc. III 202. — Hall VIII.

 Sandro Botticelli,

(Sandro di Mariano Filippi), born in Florence, 1446, died in that city May 17th, 1510. Pupil of Botticelli as goldsmith, and of Fra Filippo Lippi as a painter. Subsequently under the influence of Verrocchio. Worked in Florence, and from 1481 to 1484 in Rome.

1010. (555.) The Deposition. The body rests on the lap of the Virgin, who, fainting, is supported by St. John. Two holy women wet the feet and the head with their tears; while a third, shrouded, at the back, stands with the nails in her hand. Near by are St. Peter, St. Jerome and St. Paul.

Wood, Tempera. — 1.38 m h., 2.08 m br. — Came to the State, 1850, from the private possession of King Ludwig I. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Probably the same Pietà which, according to Vasari, was painted by Botticelli for S. Pietro Maggiore in Florence (Comp.: Crowe and Cavalcaselle III :73). — Hall VIII.

Domenico Ghirlandajo (di Tommaso Bigordi), born in Florence, 1449, died in that city Jan. 11th, 1494. Was at first a goldsmith, and, according to Vasari, studied painting under Alesso Baldovinetti. Worked chiefly in Florence.

1011. (557.) The Virgin with Four Saints. Mary, in a flamed-glory, floating between the heads of seraphs and two adoring angels. At her feet, standing in the landscape, are St. Michael and St. John the Baptist; before them kneel, on the left, St. Dominick, and on the right, St. John the Evangelist. Full figures, life-size.

Wood, Tempera. — 2.20 m h., 1.97 m br. — Formed, as centre-piece with Nos. 1012 and 1013, the outer side of the high-altar in the Church of S. Maria Novella in Florence; and was, together with the frescoes in the rear chapel, a gift of the Tornaquinci family, by whose successors these panels were sold to the Crown Prince Ludwig in 1804. The panels from the back were acquired at this time by the Berlin Museum. — Came into possession of the State in 1850. (Comp.: Crowe and Cavalc. III 244). — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall VIII.

1012. (558.) St. Laurence, in the red garment of a deacon, with a green mantle, standing before a niche, his right hand resting upon the gridiron, in his left a palm branch. Above the niche the inscription: PRESSVRAM FLANME NON TIMVI ET IN MEDIO IGNIS NON SVM ESTVATVS. Perhaps the work of Ghirlandajo's brother-in-law. Bastiani Mainardi (?). Left wing-piece to No. 1011.

Wood. — 2.08 m h., 0.56 m br. — Deriv. like the preceding. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall VIII.

Wood. — 2.08 m h., 0.51 m br. — Derivation as above. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall VIII.

Bastiani Mainardi, born in San Gimignano, died Sept. 1515. Pupil and assistant of his brother-in-law, Domenico Ghirlandajo. After 1482, worked in Florence and other cities of Tuscany.

1014. (1167.) The Virgin enthroned with the Child upon her lap. In the background of the landscape, on the right, Christ upon the Cross, and the three Holy Women; on the left, St. George on horseback. In the left foreground, the donor, half-figure. School of this master.

Wood. — 0.54 m h., 0.33 m br. — This, and the following wing-piece, were acquired, 1808, by the Crown Prince Ludwig in Rome. — Cab. 17.

1015. (1162.) St. George and St. Sebastian. Full figures. Background, landscape. School of this master.

Wood, curved above. — 0.54 m h., 0.33 m br. — The wing-pieces of No. 1014 joined. (Comp.: Crowe and Cava'c. III 137.) — Cab. 17.

Piero di Cosimo, born in Florence, 1462, died in that city, 1521. Pupil of Cosimo Rosselli. Worked in Florence.

1016. The Three Archangels. Michael with the sword and apple, Raphael with the little Tobias and the box containing the »fishy charm«; and Gabriel with the branch of lilies. Full figures, nearly life-size. School of this master.

Wood. — 1.51 m h., 1.90 m br. — Repetition, with alterations, of a picture by Verrocchio in the Academy in Florence. Came to the State in 1850 from the private possession of King Ludwig I. (Comp.: Crowe and Cavalc. III 152; Bode, Jahrb. III, 247 and the same author's Bildhauer der Renaissance, Berl. 1887, p. 126.) — Hall VIII.

Lorenzo di Credi.

born in Florence 1459, died in that city Jan. 12th. 1537. Pupil of A. del Verrocchio, at the same time as Perugino and Lionardo.

1017. (553.) The Virgin adores the Child, who lies before her, while an angel holds the infant St. John. On the left sits St. Joseph asleep. Background, a ruin and a landscape in which is the Annunciation to the Shepherds. Round.

Wood. — 0.96 m in diameter. Private property of the King. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. (Comp.: Crowe and Cavalc. IV. 430.) — Hall VIII.

Copy after Lorenzo di Credi.

1018. (1163.) The Virgin and St. Joseph before a ruin adoring the Child, who lies before them upon a cloth. In the landscape beyond, the Annunciation to the Shepherds. Round.

Wood. — 0.70 m in diameter. — This copy of an original by Credi, now in the Borghesi Gallery in Rome, was formerly ascribed to Andrea del Verrocchio. It is to be remarked that Credi modelled his work upon a picture by Verrocchio, now in the Museum of Sheffield. Bought by von Dillis in Italy in 1808. — Cab. 17.

Similar in style to Fra Angelico da Fiesole.

1019. (1154.) The Virgin with the Child in her arms who reaches after her breast. Above, the Dove and God the Father with the book of A and Ω, borne by seraphim.

Wood, gold-ground. — 0.93 m h., 0.56 m br. — Private property of the King. — Cab. 17.

School of Verona about 1480.

1020. (Schl. 986.) The Judgment of Solomon. The king sits in the centre upon a marble throne, before the steps of which lies the dead child. On the right is a woman next to the soldier who is about to divide the living child; on the left, two women.

Canvas. — 1.22 m h., 1.15 m br. — Bought by F. Müller in Rome in 1808. Originally bore the spurions inscription JACOPO BELLINI. (Comp.: Crowe and Cavalc. V. 114.) — Hall VIII.

Matteo di Giovanni di Bartolo da Siena, born in Borgo S. Sepolcro, probably in 1435, died in Siena, 1495.

1021. (Schl. 1250.) The Massacre of the Innocents. On the right sits Herod, upon a throne.

Canvas. — 1.22 m h., 1.15 m br. — Bought by Müller in Rome, 1808, for 100 scudi. Late copy after an original in the Museum at Naples. — (Comp.: Crowe and Cavalc. IV 94.) — Hall VIII.

1040. (575.) The Virgin supports the Child who, with a finch in his hands, stands upon a balustrade which is covered with gold-embroidered tapestry. At the back, behind a red drapery, are two angels. Half-figure, life-size.

Wood. — 0.64 m h., 0.40 m br. — Bought by Maximilian II. in 1833, before he became King, from the Zambeccari Gallery in Bologna, and presented to the Pinakothek. — (Comp.: Crowe and Cavalc. V 599.) — Lith. by F. Piloty. Phot. by Hanfstängl. Hall VIII.

Lionardo da Vinci, born at the Villa Vinci, near Empoli, died May 2, 1519 in the Palace of Cloux, near Amboise. Pupil of Andrea del Verocchio; worked in Florence and Milan (1484—1499); after 1516 in France at the Court of Francis I.

1040a. The Virgin gives a pink to the Child sitting beside her upon a cushion. She wears a veil upon her blond head, and, over a brick-red undergarment, a bluish-green dress, fastened at the breast by a brooch, and a blue mantle, lined with yellow. The Child is naked. In the background are two round-arched windows, through which a mountain landscape is visible.

Wood, slightly curved. — 0.61 m h., 0.45 m br. — Bought in 1889 from a private collection, for the sum of 800 marks. The picture is referable to the earliest period, antedating 1475, when Lionardo was a beginner in the studio of Andrea del Verocchio. — Cab. 17.

Imitator of Lionardo da Vinci.

Wood. — 0.67 m h., 0.51 m br. — Private property of the King. Frequently repeated; the best example is in the Museum at Dijon. — Cab. 18.

1042. (1335.) The Virgin sitting, the left arm resting upon the pedestal of a column, and holding with the right the Child, who sits upon a green cushion in her lap. The sleeve is of a pale red color, her light blue mantle is lined with orange; a small white cap of light material covers part of her auburn hair.

Wood, pieced out on all sides. — 1.10 m h., 0.78 m br. — This picture came from the Gallery of Count Schönborn in Pommersfelden into the private possession of the King in 1867. Doubtless the work of a Dutch painter, probably Bernaert van Orley. — Engr. by Alb. Reindel, 1844. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall VIII.

Canvas. — 0.80 m h., 0.58 m br. — Acquired by Elector Charles Theodore. — Cab. 18.

1044. (Schl. 1103.) The Virgin giving her breast to the Child. Knee-piece, to the left. Behind her a window with a vase of flowers upon the sill; beyond, view of a varied landscape.

Wood. — 0.68 m h., 0.49 m br. — Zweibrücken Gallery. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — The composition of this picture is undoubtedly referable to a design by Lionardo da Vinci. A weaker repetition, signed »Bernardinus de Comitibus, pinxit 1501« is in the Gallery of Bergamo; another, much superior, the work of a Flemish master, is in the Gallery of Coblenz. (Comp.: Crowe and Cavalcaselle IV. 81.) — Hall VIII.

Bernardino Luini, born at Luini on the Lago Maggiore about 1475, died after 1533. Pupil of Ambrogio Borgognone and imitator of Lionardo. Worked chiefly in the district of Milan.

Wood. — 0.41 m h., 0.35 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Lith. by N. Strixner. — Cab. 19.

Giampedrini,

(Giovanni Pietro Ricci?) Pupil, or rather imitator, of Lionardo da Vinci. Worked in Milan until about 1550.

Wood. — 0.77 m h., 0.61 m br. — Acquired by King Ludwig I. — Lith. by F. Piloty. Phot. by Hanfstängl. Copy from an original in the Borghese Gallery, Rome. (Comp.: Mündler, Recensionen, 1865.) — Hall VIII.

Cesare da Sesto, imitator of Lionardo in Milan, afterwards of Raphael in Rome. Was still living in 1523.

1048. (Schl. 1248.) The Virgin sitting upon the ground; holding in her left hand a book, she clasps the Child who attempts to embrace her. Behind them, on the left, St. John lifts a red curtain beyond which a landscape is visible.

Wood. — 1.24 m h., 1.04 m br. — Bought in Rome, 1808, by J. Müller. Much injured. — Hall VIII.

Raffaello Santi (Raphael Sanzio), born in Urbino, April 6th, 1483, died in Rome on Good Friday, April 6th, 1520. Received his first lessons from his father, Giovanni Santi, after whose death, (Aug. 1st, 1494) he was brought under the influence of the works of Signorelli, probably through Timoteo Viti. In Perugia, perhaps in 1500, he entered the studio of Pietro Perugino; was afterwards, in Florence, influenced by the paintings of Lionardo and by intercourse with Fra Bartolommeo. Worked in Rome after 1508.

1049. (534.) The Holy Family, from the House of Canigiani. In a landscape kneels the Virgin, holding with her right hand the Child, and in her left, a book. Opposite to her is St. Elizabeth with the little St. John, who offers to the Child a scroll inscribed with the Agnus Dei. Behind is St. Joseph leaning upon his staff and looking upwards to St. Elizabeth, who turns towards him. Signed (upon the border of the cloth upon the Virgin's breast): RAPHAEL VRBINAS. Full figures, nearly life-size.

Wood. — 1.32 m h., 0.98 m. br. — According to Vasari, this picture was painted originally for Domenico Canigiani in Florence, and came into the possession of the Grand Duke of Tuscany; at the marriage of the Elector John William of the Palatinate with Maria Loisia, daughter of the Grand Duke Cosimo III. it was transferred, as a bridal gift, to Düsseldorf. The panel was originally higher and terminated above in a glory of grouped angels, but these, being badly injured, were painted over in Düsseldorf. An engraving by Giulio Bonasone and two old copies in the sacristy of S. Frediano and in the Casa Rinuccini in Florence, show the original state of the picture. A study in pen drawing is in the collection of the Duc d'Aumale in Chantilly. (Comp.: Passavant Raphael, Leipzig 1839. I, 115, II, 61; Müntz, Raphael, Second Edition, Paris 1886, p. 213 ff.; Springer, Raphael and Michel Angelo Leipzig, 1878, pag. 83, and Crowe and Cavalcaselle, Raphael, Leipzig 1883, pag. 231 fg.), Engraved by C. Hess 1804; G. Bonasone (Bartsch 65); R. Bowin; G. Calendi; S. Amsler (1836); J. Th. Prestel, and by L. Cossé. — Lith. by F. Piloty, by whom also the heads in 5 sheets. Phot. by J. Albert and by Hanfstängl. — Hall VII.

1050. (1206.) The Madonna Tempi. The Virgin standing, turned to the right, in a little over half-figure, presses the Child, sitting upon her left arm, tenderly to her breast with the right hand. Background: landscape with a city.

Wood. — 0.77 m h., 0.53 m br. — This picture was painted by Raphael while still in Florence, and takes its name from the House of Tempi in Florence, where it was bought by King Ludwig I. in 1828, for 15000 Florentine scudi. Compare: Reber, Jahrb. f. Münchener Geschichte. III, 1889. Until 1835 it was in the Chapel of St. Cecilia of the Palace. The original cartoon, in black and white chalk upon gray paper, and cut, into an oval form, is in the Musée Fabre in Montpellier. (Comp.: Passavant I. 120, II. 81. Müntz 194 ff. Crowe and Cavalc. Raphael p. 212.) — Engraved by Ant. Morghen, by A. Boucher-Desnoyers (Recueil d'estampes 1821), by Friedr. Wagner (1832), by S. Jesi (1837), by Th. Kiessling, twice by S. Amsler, and by J. L. Raab. — Lith. by F. Piloty and G. Wolff. Phot. by Albert and by Hanfstängl. — Cab. 19.

1051. (547.) The Madonna della Tenda. The Virgin, in profile to the right, holds with her right hand the Child upon her lap, and lays her left upon the neck of the little St. John, who stands near with the cross, while the Child turns toward him. Background: a green curtain. Half-figure, life-size.

Wood. — 0.68 m h., 0.55 m br. — This picture was painted by Raphael after his removal to Rome, and appears to have been in the Escorial until the beginning of the present century. Thence during the Napoleonic Wars, it was carried to England, where it came into possession of Sir Thomas Baring. From him it was bought by the Crown Prince Ludwig in 1814, for 5000 pounds sterling. An old copy is in the Gallery at Turin. (Comp.: Passavant I. 300, II. 297; Crowe and Cavalcaselle, Raphael, II, p. 184, 185.) Engraved by J. C. Thevenin 1850. — Lith. by F. Piloty. Etched by J. L. Raab. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Cab. 19.

Wood. — 0.61 m h., 0.45 m br. — Formerly in the Altoviti Palace in Rome; afterwards in the Casa Altoviti in Florence, where it was bought, in 1808, by v. Dillis for the Crown Prince Ludwig for 49000 lire. Is is very probable that this picture represents the young Bindo Altoviti, for whose portrait it was held until the middle of the last century; later it was supposed, erroneously, to be the portrait of Raphael himself. (Comp.: Passavant, work quoted above, I. 184, II. 334. Müntz, work quoted above, p. 308, ff. Grimm, Essays III.) Bayersdorfer maintains it to be an original by Giulio Romano. Engraved by R. Strange (1787), by G. B. Cecchi (Uomini illustri), by J. Frey, by Raf. Morghen, by C. Barth (1816), by G. Farrugia (1822), by G. Fusinati (1829), by J. H. Lips, (Füssli, Leben Raphaels), by F. John for the Aglaja. Etched by C. Hess. Lith. by N. Strixner, by Rehberg (Raphael, München 1824), by W. Flachenecker, and by F. Piloty. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall VIII.

1053. (1133.) Youthful head of St. John. Full face.

The red garment, cut low in the neck, is bordered with black.

Painted al fresco, upon a tile. — 0.43 m h., 0.31 m br. — The authenticity of this picture has been unjustly doubted by J. Lermolieff, p. 95, who declares it to be a modern forgery; Passavant pronounces the work to be a genuine Raphael. — Cab. 18.

Copies after Raphael.

1054. (582a.) St. Cecilia, in full figure, with a small organ in her hands, looks upwards to a gloria in the clouds.

Canvas. — 1.52 m h., 0.88 m br. — Copy of the chief figure in the St. Cecilia in Bologna, by Raphael. Obtained from a private collection in Bologna by King Ludwig I. in 1859. Private property of the King. — Lith. by S. Braun. — Hall X.

1055. (1425.) The Madonna del Cardellino. The original is in the Uffizi in Florence.

Wood. — 1.06 m h., 0.76 m br. — Private property of the King. — Hall VIII.

1056. (Schl. 1227.) The Holy Family under the Oak. Copy of a painting in the Prado in Madrid, which was formerly supposed to be an original, but which has proved to be the work of an imitator of Raphael.

Wood. — 1.37 m h., 1.03 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Hall VIII.

Mariotto Albertinelli, born in Florence Oct. 13th, 1474, died in that city Nov. 5th, 1515. Pupil of Cosimo Rosselli; influenced by his friend and fellow-pupil, Fra Bartolommeo di St. Marco.

1057. (545.) The Annunciation. The Virgin, standing in an open hall with arched doorway, receives the message of the angel kneeling before her. In the niches at either side are St. Sebastian and St. Lucia.

Wood. — 1.65 m h., 1.97 m br. — Bought in Florence, 1834, by King Ludwig I for 550 Louisd'or. (Comp.: Crowe and Cavalc. IV 498). — Hall VIII.

Girolamo del Pacchia, born in Siena, Jan. 4th, 1477, died after 1535. Successor of Bern. Fungai; lived in Rome from 1500 to 1515. Afterwards worked in Siena.

1058. (1168.) The Virgin, turned to the left, and looking out of the picture, has the Child upon her arm, who, smiling, clasps her neck. Upon either side are two angels. Half-figure.

Wood, curved above. — 0.61 m h., 0.43 m br. — Private property of the King. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. (Comp. Crowe and Cavalc. IV 401). — Cab. 19.

1059. (1161.) St. Bernardino of Siena; holding in his left hand a gold-framed tablet, with the monogram of Christ in a glory of rays, to which the Saint points with his right hand. At the back: two angels. Half-figures.

Wood, curved above. — 0.61 m h., 0.43 m br. — Private property of the King. — Cab. 19.

Innocenzo (Francucci) da Imola, born in Imola about 1494, died in Bologna about 1550. Pupil of Francia after 1508; later of Albertinelli. Imitator of Raphael; worked chiefly in Bologna.

1060. (581.) The Virgin with the Child, in a glory of angels, appearing to Bishop Petronius, patron of Bologna, who holds the model of a Church. Upon one side is St. Clara; upon the other, St. Francis, St. Sebastian and St. Catherine of Siena. Opposite to the latter is an abbot, as donor.

Wood. — 2.96 m h., 2.37 m br. — This painting formerly decorated the high-altar of the Corpus Domini Church in Bologna; it afterwards came into possession of the Ercolani family, and was sold to King Ludwig I. in the winter of 1829. — Hall VIII.

Francesco Granacci, born in Florence July 23^d, 1477, died Nov. 30th, 1543. Pupil of Dom. Ghirlandajo; afterwards influenced by Michel Angelo and Raphael.

1061. (540.) St. Magdalen, in a blue dress and light red mantle lined with green, the vase of ointment in her right hand. Full-figure, standing.

Wood. — 1.26 m h., 0.62 m br. — Came to the State in 1850, from the private possession of the King. — Hall VIII.

Wood. — 1.26 m h., 0.62 m br. — Derivation like the preceding. — Hall VIII.

Wood. — 1.26 m h., 0.62 m br. — Derivation as above. — Hall VIII.

Wood. — 1.26 m h., 1.62 m br. — Derivation as above. — Hall VIII.

1065. (1171.) The Virgin, kneeling, adores the Child lying upon the ground; opposite to her sits St. Joseph. In the landscape, on the left: the Manger at Bethlehem and the Annunciation to the Shepherds.

Wood. — 0.63 m h., 0.73 m br. — Private property of the King. Formerly attributed to Fra Bartolommeo. (Comp.: Crowe and Cavalcaselle IV 483.) — Cab. 18.

Andrea del Sarto,

born in Florence, 1487, died in that city Jan. 22^d, 1531. Pupil of Piero di Cosimo; influenced by Fra Bartolommeo and Raphael. Worked in Florence.

1066. (548.) The Holy Family. The Virgin, kneeling, supports the Child before her, who is looking around at the little St. John, held by the aged Elizabeth. On the left stands an angel with the shepherd's pipe, upon whose shoulder another lays his hand.

Wood. — 1.36 m h., 1.04 m br. — Düsseldorf Gallery. Although the condition of the picture, which has suffered much in the course of time, greatly detracts from its appearance, the numerous pentimenti, visible upon it, leave little doubt that it is the original of the numerous repetitions so frequently met with, especially in Italy and France. The next best is that in the Louvre, likewise badly injured. — Engraved by L. von Montmorillon, by C. Hess and by L. Cossé. Phot. by Hanfstängl. (Comp.: Crowe and Cavalc. IV. 584.) — Hall VIII.

Copies after Andrea del Sarto.

1067. (1181.) Zacharias, in the temple, receives from an angel the announcement of the birth of John.

Paper on wood. — 0.30 m h., 0.35 m br. — These pictures, gray in gray, and the following three companion-pieces, are copies of frescoes by Andrea del Sarto, in the Chiostro dello Scalzo in Florence. From the sacristy of the Church of the Theatines in Munich. — Lith. by F. Piloty. (Comp.: Crowe and Cavalcaselle, work quoted above.) — Cab. 19.

1068. (1175.) The Visitation of Mary. The Virgin before the house of Zacharius, is received by Elizabeth; behind her is St. Joseph with a bundle. See No. 1067.

Paper on wood. — 0.30 m h., 0.35 m br. — Derivation like the preceding. — Lith. by F. Piloty. — Cab. 19.

1069. (1174.) St. John the Baptist preaching in the wilderness to the people about him. See Nr. 1067.

Paper on wood. — 0.30 m h., 0.35 m br. — Derivation as above. — Lith. by F. Piloty. — Cab. 19.

1070. (1186.) The daughter of Herodias brings to her the head of John the Baptist. See No. 1067.

Paper on wood. — 0.30 m h., 0.35 m br. — Derivation as above. — Lith. by F. Piloty. — Cab. 19.

1071. (576.) St. Joseph, with the left hand under the chin. Breast-piece. Copy from the Holy Family of the Barberini Gallery in Rome.

Paper on wood. — 0.55 m h., 0.44 m br. — Obtained by King Ludwig I in Vienna in 1814. — Lith. by Piloty. (Comp.: Crowe and Cavalcaselle, work quoted above.) — Cab. 19.

Dominico Puligo, born 1475, died 1527. Pupil of Ridolfo Ghirlandajo; chiefly influenced by his friend, Andrea del Sarto. Worked in Florence.

Wood. — 1.25 m h., 0.90 m br. — Bought by F. Müller in Rome, 1808. — Hall VIII.

Giovannantonio Bazzi called il Sodoma, born in Vercelli, 1477, died in Siena Feb. 16th or 17th, 1549. Pupil of the painter upon glass, Mart. Spanzotti in Vercelli from 1490 to 1497; afterwards influenced by Lionardo in Milan. Worked in Siena after 1501; afterwards in Rome.

Wood. — 0.70 m h., 0.48 m br. — Private property of the King. Early period of this master. (Comp.: Lermolieff, work quoted above.) — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall VIII.

1074. 1180.) Head of the Archangel Michael; half life-size. Fragment of a larger picture. The signature upon the gold clasp of the armor: R. S. is not genuine. Oval.

Wood. — 0.24 m h., 0.17 m br. — This picture was bought as a Raphael by King Ludwig I from the Sampieri family in Bologna. Private property of the King. Attribution uncertain. — Cab. 19.

Andrea del Brescianino, real name Andrea Piccinelli, influenced by Sodoma in Siena in the beginning of the XVI century; and studied the works of Fra Bartolommeo in Florence after 1525.

1075. (551.) The Holy Family. The Virgin sitting before a green curtain with the Child upon her lap, clasping him with the right arm. On the left, at the back, St. Joseph. Knee-piece.

Wood. — 0.71 m h., 0.55 m br. — Bought by the Crown Prince Ludwig in Paris, 1815, from the collection of M^{me}. Du Bois for 8000 Frs.. Copy from the chief group of Raphael's Madonna del Baldachino. Formerly attributed to Fra Bartolommeo. — Lith. by N. Strixner. (Comp.: Crowe and Cavalcaselle IV 483.) — Hall VIII.

Domenico Beccafumi, born in delle Cortine, near Siena, 1486, died in Siena, May 18th, 1551. Pupil of G. B. Tozzo, called Capanna, in that city; successor of Sodoma.

1076. (560.) The Virgin kneels on the left, before the Child, who lies with his arms about the neck of the Lamb. Behind is the little St. John with cross and inscribed scroll; upon the right, seen half from the back, sits St. Joseph.

Round. Wood. — 1.13 m in diameter. Bought by King Ludwig I from the Marsigli family in Siena; delivered to the State in 1850. — Hall VIII.

Ridolfo Ghirlandajo, son of Domenico Ghirlandajo, born in Florence, Jan. 4th, 1483, died in that city June 6th, 1561. Pupil of his father, of his uncle David, and of Fra Bartolommeo; also influenced by Lionardo and Raphael.

1077. The Madonna in a landscape, kneeling upon the ground. She holds with both hands the standing Child, to whom the little St. John offers the staff of the cross. Background: armed cavaliers before a harbor city. School of this master.

Wood, round. — 0.95 m in diameter. Private property of the King. — Hall VIII.

Umbrian-Bolognese, about 1510,

(allied in character to the works of Lorenzo Costa.)

Wood. — 0.52 m h., 0.41 m br. — This picture was, during the last century, in the possession of Leonardo del Riccio in Florence, and was declared a work of Raphael by J. Hugford and R. Mengs; it came as such into the collection of Count Firmian of Leopoldskron, where it was bought by King Ludwig I. Another portrait by the same hand, better preserved, and also attributed to Raphael, is in the Gallery at Hampton Court. (Comp.: Passavant, work quoted above, I 87, II 38.) Engraved by P. A. Pazzi. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Cab. 19.

Umbrian-Florentine, about 1520.

1079. (1189.) The Virgin with the Child standing upon her lap. Knee-piece.

Canvas. — 0.59 m h., 0.44 m br. — Obtained by Elector Charles Theodore. Copy of a picture, attributed to Raphael, in the Collection of Lord Northbrook, London. Perhaps a pasticcio. — Lith. by L. Quaglio. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Cab. 18.

Benvenuto Tisi called Garofalo, born, probably in Ferrara, 1481, died in that city Sept. 6th, 1559. Pupil of Dom. Panetti in Ferrara, of Boccaccio Boccacino in Cremona; influenced by L. Costa and by Raphael.

1080. (1333.) Pietà. The Virgin with the body of Christ, which is held under the arms by St. John, upon her lap. Near the latter stands Mary Magdalen weeping. In the left foreground: St. Jerome as Cardinal and St. Francis showing the miraculous wound in his side. On the right kneel St. Augustine and his mother, St. Monica. Background: hilly landscape. Dated on the right, below: M. D. XXX. LVIO.

Canvas. — 2.43 m h., 1.57 m br. — Bought in 1867 by King Ludwig I. from the Braschi family in Rome for 7000 fls. — Hall VIII.

1081. (574.) The Virgin sits upon a marble seat with the Child upon her lap. On the left side: the Archangel Michael, holding the scales and the sword drawn against Satan, whom he treads under foot; on the right: St. John the Baptist with the Lamb. Background: landscape.

Canvas — 0.62 m h., 0.58 m br. — Zweibrücken Gallery. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. (Comp.: Lermolieff p. 63.) — Cab. 19.

1082. (1172.) The Virgin holds with both hands the Child sitting upon a marble pedestal before her. Background: landscape. Half-figures.

Wood. — 0.49 m h., 0.37 m br. — From the Palace of Nymphenburg. — Cab. 18.

Lorenzo Lotto,

born probably in Treviso, towards 1480, died in Loretto 1555 or 1556. Trained in Venice under the influence of Bellini and his successors. Worked chiefly in Venice and Bergamo.

1083. (552.) The Mystic Marriage of St. Catherine with the Child, who sits upon the lap of the Virgin. On the right, St. Joseph with a book. Beyond the green drapery of the background, on the left, is a view of a landscape in which are two beasts of burthen. Signed below, upon the wheel of the Saint:

LOTVS
F

Wood. — 0.70 m h., 0.90 m br. — From the Archiepiscopal Palace in Würzburg. (Comp.: Crowe and Cavalc. VI. 565 ff.; and Lermolieff, work previously quoted, p. 59.) — Hall VIII.

Sebastiano Florigerio, born after 1500, worked between 1525 and 1543 in Friuli. Pupil of Pellegrino da San Daniele.

1084. (482.) A company of nine persons singing. Half-figures.

Canvas. — 0.91 m h., 1.15 m br. — Crowe and Cavalcaselle (VI. p. 346) are inclined to attribute this picture from Friuli to Florigerio. From the collection of Count Elz. — Cab. 20.

Rocco Marconi, born in Treviso; worked in Venice in the beginning of the sixteenth century.

1085. (579.) St. Nicholas in ecclesiastical robes, with the bishop's staff, and reading in a book; two angels standing upon the clouds above, hold over him the mitre. On the left side: St. John the Baptist; on the right: St. Philip. The signature is not genuine: MDXXX. F. SEBASTIAM (!) F. PER AGOSTINO GHIGI.

Wood. — 2.16 m h., 1.41 m br. — Bought from the gallery of the Empress Josephine in Malmaison, in 1815, as a Seb. del Piombo for 18,000 Frcs. Pictures by the same master, in various Italian galleries, are ascribed to Rocco Marconi, but this attribution is not assured. This work shows quite as plainly the characteristics of the school of Ferrara as of that of Venice. (Comp.: Crowe and Cavalc. VI. 423; and Lermolieff p. 56). — Hall VIII.

Girolamo da Santa Croce, born in Santa Croce near Bergamo. Influenced by the school of Giov. Bellini. Worked in Venice up to the middle of the sixteenth century.

1086. (1193.) The Holy Relationship. In the centre, the Virgin with the Child upon her lap; on the right, St. Elizabeth with the little St. John who holds a goldfinch; on the left, St. Joseph with an inscribed scroll; behind, upon the right and left of the Madonna, are the two Marys. Half-figures.

Wood. — 0.67 m h., 1.05 m br. — Bought as a Palma Vecchio, for 6000 Frcs., from the estate of the Empress Josephine at Malmaison in 1815. (Comp.: Crowe and Cavalc. work quoted above, VI. 488; and Lermolieff, work quoted above p. 28). — Hall VIII.

Sebastiano (Luciani) del Piombo, born in Venice about 1485, died in Rome June 21st, 1547. Pupil of Giov. Bellini; came under the influence of Giorgione in Venice; after 1512 worked in Rome.

1087. (Schl. 1201.) Portrait of an ecclesiastic with a full beard, in the black cap of a priest and a gray moire tunic. Breast-piece, to the left.

Canvas. — 0.49 m h., 0.45 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. Attribution uncertain. — Hall VIII.

1088. (578.) St. Jerome, clad with a blue cloth about the loins, sits writing, his left foot resting upon a step, in a hall with pilasters. On the left, near him, is the lion; at the right, upon the step, is a skull lying upon an open book. Full-figure, life-size, to the right.

Wood. — 1.80 m h., 1.30 m br. — This picture, brought to Munich in 1803, from the Archbishopal Palace in Würzburg, was at that time attributed to Raphael, as it has since been to various Italian and Dutch masters. (Comp.: Crowe and Cavalcaselle VI. 555. Lermolieff, work quoted above, p. 27.) Engraved by C. Hess, as a Palma Vecchio; and by J. M. Haas, as a Raphael. — Hall VIII.

Andrea (Meldolla) Schiavone, born in Sebenico in Dalmatia, probably in 1522, died in Venice, 1582. Influenced by Titian and Parmigianino. Worked in Venice.

1089. (1183.) Parnassus. Apollo playing upon the lyre, surrounded by the Nine Muses. On the left stand three poets, crowned with laurel, and a youth, listening, writes their words in a book; on the right, stands a young horn-player. Around the three laurel trees float five genii dispensing wreaths.

Wood. — 0.37 m h., 0.68 m br. — Mannheim Gallery. Perhaps an old harpsichord cover. (Comp. Lermolieff p. 48.) Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Cab. 19.

Jacopo (Carrucci) da Puntormo, born in Puntormo near Empoli, May 1494, died in Florence, Dec. 31st, 1556. Pupil of Mariotto Albertinelli and Andr. del Sarto; later influenced by Michel Angelo.

1090. (449.) The Virgin, in a bright red undergarment, sits with an open book in her right hand, holding with her left the naked Child, who presses himself to her. In the background, in small figures, St. Joseph at work, with St. Elizabeth and the little St. John.

Wood. — 1.20 m h., 1.01 m br. — Private property of the King. This design was frequently repeated in the later period of the master. — Hall VIII.

Giorgio Vasari,

born in Arezzo July 30th, 1511, died in Florence June 27th, 1574. Pupil of the painter upon glass, Guglielmo di Marsiglia in Arezzo, and of Andr. del Sarto in Florence. Imitator of Michel Andgelo. Worked chiefly in Rome and Florence.

Wood. — 1.36 m h., 1.02 m br. — Düsseldorf Gallery. — Hall VIII.

1092. (484.) The Virgin holds the Child upon her lap and lays her left hand upon the shoulder of the little St. John, who points to the cross held by the Infant. On the left, behind, is St. Joseph.

Wood. — 0.97 m h., 0.76 m br. — Private property of the King. — Hall VIII.

School of Rome.

Wood. — 1.91 m h., 1.30 m br. — Düsseldorf Gallery. — Engraved by C. Hess and by v. Green. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — This picture, formerly attributed to Raphael, is probably by a Dutch imitator who had worked long in Italy, perhaps Franz Floris de Vriendt. — Hall VIII.

Antonio (Allegri) da Correggio, born at Correggio in the district of Modena, 1494, died in that place March 5th, 1534. Said to have been a pupil of Ant. Bartoletti at Correggio and of Franc. Bianchi of Ferrara at Modena; he was, at all events, allied to the Ferrarese-Bolognese School, and influenced by the study of Lorenzo Costa and of Franc. Francia.

1094. (1266.) A young satyr sitting upon a stone and playing upon a syrinx; near him leans a stringed instrument. On the left; a landscape with a grazing deer.

Wood. — 0.19 m h., 0.16 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — (Comp.: Lermolieff p. 40, 41, who ascribes it to Lor. Lotto.) Without doubt an immature work, by Correggio. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Cab. 19.

1095. (469.) The Virgin sitting under a tree, with the Child upon her lap. At her side, St. Ildefonso and St. Jerome, with an angel-boy upon whose shoulder the Madonna lays her left hand. Full-figures, half life-size.

Canvas. — 1.11 m h., 0.75 m br. — This painting, a much injured piece cut from a larger picture, is from Parma, and, in 1807, was transferred from wood to canvas by Bonnemaison in Paris, from whom it was bought, in 1815, for 18000 frs. (Comp.: Lermolieff p. 66.) — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall VIII.

School and Imitators of Correggio.

1096. (580.) The Virgin with the Child upon clouds, in a glory between adoring angels and cherubim; below are St. Jerome and St. James, with the donor.

Wood. — 2.03 m h., 1.36 m br. — Bought of Bonnemaison in Paris in 1815 for 18000 Frs. Formerly called a Correggio, afterwards ascribed to Rondani, Girolamo da Carpi, Carotto and Anselmi. (Comp.: Lermolieff p. 651.) — Engraved, as a Correggio, by P. Bettelini (1818). The St. Jerome from this picture was etched by R. Langer, 1818. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall VIII.

1098. (1187.) Cupid, reading from a sheet which he holds in both hands.

Sketch upon paper. — 0.67 m h., 0.50 m br. — Copy from the Mercury instructing Cupid, in the National Gallery of London (No 10). Painted in 1520. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Engr. by Amalie Baader. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Cap. 19.

Giacomo Palma il Vecchio, born at Serinalta, not far from Bergamo, about 1480, died in Venice towards the end of July or beginning of August 1528. In painting he imitated Giov. Bellini and Giorgione.

1107. (582.) Portrait of the artist by himself. He is looking over the right shoulder out of the picture, with a camel's skin upon his back and holding in his right hand a pair of gloves.

Wood. — 0.70 m h., 0.54 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — This picture is praised by Vasari as a masterpiece and portrait of this painter (Ed. Milanese 1880, p. 246, 247.) has been erroneously held to be a work by Giorgione since the time when Ridolfi (Comp.: Maraviglie, etc. 1648, edition of 1835 l. p. 136.) saw it in the Collection van Veerle in Antwerp. In the critical editions of Vasari: (Schorn and Förster 1845 III.; Lemonier 1852 IX.; and Milanese 1880 V), the identity of this painting with that seen, and described by Vasari, is unanimously acknowledged; and, moreover, investigations based upon technical considerations have long since decided this to be a portrait by Palma. (Comp.: Mündler work quoted above; Crowe and Cavalcaselle VI, 550; Lermolieff p. 16 and 41.) — Etched by W. Hollar (Parthey 1367). Lith. by W. Flachenecker and by F. Rehberg. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall IX.

1108. (588.) Before a vine-wreathed portico sits the Virgin with the Child, from whom St. Roch, kneeling, receives the rosary. Behind these, on the right, is St. Magdalen. Background: landscape.

Wood. — 0.66 m h., 0.91 m br. — Düsseldorf Gallery. (Comp.: Crowe and Cavalcaselle VI. 541; Lermolieff p. 17.) Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall IX.

Tiziano Vecellio, commonly called Titian, born in Pieve di Cadore, 1477, died in Venice, Aug. 29th, 1576. Pupil of Giov. Bellini in Venice; influenced by Giorgione. Worked in Venice.

1109. (587.) The Virgin sitting upon a low seat before a colonnade, receives the Child from the arms of the bearded St. John, towards whom the Infant Christ is looking. At the feet of St. John lies the lamb. On the right kneels a bearded donor in a fur garment, between whom and the Virgin is a view of a landscape. Full figures.

Canvas. — 0.73 m h., 0.92 m br. — (Comp.: Crowe and Cavalcaselle Tizian p. 696; and Lermolieff p. 47.) Came from the collection of Archduke Leopold William of Brussels to the Düsseldorf Gallery. — Engraved by F. van den Steen in D. Teniers Theatrum Pictorium 1670. Lith. by F. Piloty. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall IX.

1110. (470.) The Vanity of Earthly things, personified by a beautiful woman, who, holding in her right hand a glimmering candle, is leaning against a round mirror in which, together with jewels and gold coins, is reflected an old woman spinning. Half-figure.

Canvas. — 0.98 m h., 0.82 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Has suffered much by cleaning. An early work by Titian, long ascribed to Giorgione. (Comp.: Crowe and Cavalcaselle VI 192, and Lermolieff p. 41, 42.) Lith. by W. Flachenecker and F. Piloty. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall IX.

Canvas mounted on wood. — 0.88 m h., 0.74 m br. — Düsseldorf Gallery. — Formerly erroneously regarded as Pietro Aretino. A portrait of the same person, painted by Giorgione, in the costume of a knight of Malta, is in the Uffizi. (Comp.: Crowe and Cavalcaselle Tiz. p. 696, and Lermolieff p. 45.) — Lith. by W. Flachenecker. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall IX.

1112. (496.) The Emperor Charles V. dressed, in black, with a black cap and overgarment lined with brown fur, sits, turned to the right, in an armchair covered with red velvet. On his breast he wears the Order of the Golden Fleece upon a black ribbon. He holds a glove in his right hand, which rests upon the arm of the chair; the left hand is gloved. The floor is covered with a red cloth. Behind the chair, a yellow damask screen is drawn aside, displaying a column and a distant landscape. Full-figure, life size. Signed on the right, below; upon the parapet of the window:

Titianus.F

And upon the upper frame of the same:

MDXLVIII

Canvas. — 2.00 m h., 1.18 m br. — Painted in Augsburg, 1548, whither Titian was called to the Imperial Court, temporarily there established. (Comp.: Crowe and Cavalcaselle, Tiz. p. 514. German Ed. and Lermolieff p. 46.) Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Etched by J. L. Raab, and, as breast-piece, by C. Hess. Lith. by W. Flachenecker. Phot. by Hanfstängl, and by Albert. A sketch for this portrait, in oil, is preserved in the Gallery of Vienna, No. 510. — Hall IX.

Titianus Fecit

Canvas. — 1.72 m h., 1.32 m br. — Bought in Paris in 1815 from Gen. Sebastiani for 40,000 frcs. Much injured. (Comp.: Crowe and Cavalc. work quoted above, p. 696, 697; and Lermolieff, p. 47.) Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall IX.

1114. (1329.) The Crowning with Thorns. Christ sits upon the steps of the Hall of Judgment, in a white mantle, with hands bound, while three officers press the crown of thorns upon his head with staves. A young halberdier bows the knee before him. In the right foreground is a boy with a bundle of reeds. The hall is lighted by a lamp with five flames.

Canvas. — 2.80 m h., 1.81 m br. — This work is from the latest period of the artist's life. It shows in many places, as does also the Pietà of the same period, now in the Academy of Venice, the work of Palma Giov., for example, in the uplifted right hand of the halbardier. This is probably the picture which belonged to Tintoretto. According to tradition, it came from the Netherlands; it was certainly known to Van Dyck, as is evident from his paintings of the same subject in Berlin and Madrid. (Comp.: Crowe and Cavalc. Tiz. 580, 679, 680, 689. Lermolieff p. 44.) Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Etched by J. L. Raab. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall IX.

is attached a coral cross. His right hand rests upon a long staff, the left holds the hilt of a dagger. Knee-piece. In the gray ground-work, on the right above, is inscribed: ANNVM . AGENS XXXXI.

Canvas. — 1.40 m h., 1.18 m br. — According to Crowe and Cavalc., Tiz. p. 717, a much injured work by Tintoretto. (Comp.: Lermolieff p. 46, who doubts its attribution to Titian.) Private property of the King. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall IX.

1116. (524.) Venus, seated and turned towards the right, is about to initiate a young Bacchante, kneeling before her, into the mysteries of the service of Bacchus by uncovering a figure of Priapus. On the right, behind the young Bacchante, is an old satyr holding up a silver fruit-dish; in the centre, behind the two women, is a young satyr with grape-vines; on the left, and standing upon the seat, is Amor, laying his head and both hands upon the shoulders of Venus. Knee-piece. Figures life-size.

Canvas. — 1.15 m. h., 1.32 m br. — Bought by Elector Charles Theodore from de Vigneux. Probably in great measure, if not entirely, the work of a scholar of this master, with reminiscences of the instruction of Cupid in the Borghese Gallery, and the Allegory of Davalos, in the Louvre. (Comp.: Crowe and Cavalc., work quoted above, p. 717; and Lermolieff, p. 47.) — Lith. by F. Piloty. Phot. by J. Albert and by Hanfstängl. — Hall IX.

Francesco Vecellio, born in Pieve di Cadore about 1480, died in that city, 1559. Pupil of his brother, Titian. Worked in Venice and Cadore.

1117. (450.) The Virgin sitting upon the ground, adoring the Child who lies upon her lap. On the left, St. Jerome and St. Francis; on the right, St. Antony, who holds the foot of the Child. Figures half life-size.

Canvas. — 1.00 m h., 1.37 m br. — As early as the time of Ridolfi (Comp.: Maraviglie I. 259,) this picture was in the van Uffel Collection as a Titian, but it has since been determined to be the work of one of his pupils. (Comp.: Mündler, work quoted above; Crowe and Cavalc. Titian p. 717; and Lermolieff, worked previously quoted, p. 45.) — Mannheim Gallery. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall IX.

School of Titian.

1118. (1422.) Portrait of a young man in a black cap and black coat, with a finely folded neck-ruff. Breast-piece, to the left.

Canvas. — 0.69 m h., 0.60 m br. — Düsseldorf Gallery. — Hall IX.

Domenico Capriolo,

probably identical with Francesco Domenico Mancini of the School of Treviso. Imitator of Giov. Bellini and Giorgione; flourished between 1500 and 1520.

1119. (1421.) Portrait of a man in a black cap and thick, curly hair, looking over the left shoulder out of the picture. In the right background, the marble torso of a woman; on the left, view of a church. Signed: MDXIII. DOMINICVS. F. Under this, a hind reposing, and the year of the man's age; A. XXV. Half-figure, life-size.

Canvas. — 1.21 m h., 0.88 m br. — Other pictures signed like this, or similarly, are in St. Petersburg, London and Pavia; the present work is certainly a later repetition. — Hall IX.

Paris Bordone, born in Treviso, 1500, died in Venice, Jan. 19th, 1570. Pupil of Titian; worked in cities of Upper Italy, chiefly in Treviso and Venice.

1120. (1211.) Portrait of a man dressed in black, with a full and heavy beard, holding a book in his right hand. Dated below, upon the stone parapet: M. D. XXIII.

Canvas. — 0.78 m h., 0.66 m br. — (Comp.: Crowe and Cavalc. Tizian 717; Lermolieff p. 47.) — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — Etched, as a Titian, by W. Hollar in 1649. Lith. by W. Flachenecker. Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall IX.

1121. (492.) A man, dressed in black, before a table covered with jewels. Behind him, on the right, a blond girl with a dress cut low in the neck. Half-figures, life-size.

Canvas. — 0.98 m h., 0.80 m br. — Electoral Gallery of Munich. — (Comp.: Crowe and Cavalc. Tiz. II 487; and Lermolieff, work previously quoted, p. 46.) — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall IX.

1122. (483.) Portrait of a woman in a red velvet dress, with pearls braided in her blonde hair; a fan of ostrich feathers in her right hand; the left resting upon her side. Knee-piece.

Canvas. — 1.04 m h., 0.83 m br. — Copy made by the Venetian painter Lattanzio Guarena in the first quarter of the present century; bought by King Maximilian I. for the State Collection. Old copies of this picture are frequently met with. The original, according to Mündler, is in private possession in Carlsruhe. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall IX.

Alessandro Buonvicino, called Moretto, born in Brescia about 1498, died in that city, 1555. Pupil of Fioravante Ferramola of Brescia, influenced afterwards by the study of Titian, Palma Vecchio, Romanino and Raphael.

1123. (452.) Portrait of an ecclesiastic with a black beard, the head covered by a cap; leaning with the right arm upon a book of homilies, and holding in his left hand a handkerchief. On the right is an hour-glass upon two books. Half-figure, to the right.

Canvas. — 1.00 m h., 0.86 m br. — Formerly attributed to Moroni and so considered by Lermolieff, 48 and 49 p. Bought from the estate of Canova in Venice for 1400 gulden. Private property of the King. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall IX.

Giovanni Battista Moroni, born at Bondo near Albino about 1520, died in Bergamo, Feb. 5th, 1578. Pupil of Moretto; worked in the province of Bergamo.

1124. (583.) Portrait of a woman, in a fur-trimmed robe, with a yellowish head-dress and white ruffle. Breast-piece to the right.

Canvas. — 0.60 m h., 0.52 m br. — Bought by King Ludwig I. Private property of the King. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall IX.

Francesco Torbido, called il Moro, born in Verona about 1500, died in that city about 1581; influenced by the works of Giorgione.

Canvas. — 0.62 m h., 0.53 m br. — (Comp.: Lermolieff p. 53.) — Bought by King Maximilian I. in Vienna in 1814. — Phot. by Hanfstängl. — Hall IX.

Der Cicerone

Königl. Aelteren Pinakothek zu München.

Eine Anleitung zum Genuss und Verständniss der hier vereinigten Kunstschatze.

Von

Georg Hirth und Richard Muther.

Preis 3 Mk., gebunden 3 Mk. 50 Pf.

Dieser Führer hat den Zweck, dem Besucher die künstlerische u. kunstwissenschaftliche Bedeutung der Schätze der Kgl. Aelteren Pinakothek zu erklären. Es geschieht dies in einer allgemeinen Einleitung über Kunstgenuss und Kunstverständnis, malerische Auffassung und Techniken etc., ferner in einer pragmatischen Darstellung d. einzelnen Bilder. Der Leser erfährt hier von Schule zu Schule, von Meister zu Meister nach dem neuesten Stande der kunstwissenschaftlichen Forschung alles Wesentliche — es wird ihm deutlich erklärt, welche Partien der Kunstgeschichte die Pinakothek in hervorragender Weise, welche anderen sie nur schwach oder gar nicht repräsentirt — mit Hinweisen auf andere berühmte Sammlungen und Galerien.

Vorräthig in allen Buch- und Kunsthandlungen.
